LYNN GIRL, ARRESTED, TRIES SUICIDE

Allies Enter Combles; Great Battle in Streets

ATTACKS TERRORIZE ROXBURY GIRLS

PREFERS DEATH TO JAIL

Ella Dowling, eighteen years old, of No. 20 Tremont street, Salem, attempted suicide today in a room at the Lynn police station, where she was lodged shortly after being arrested by Probation Officer Charles Colby at the request of the prison parole board.

The girl, who aided the police to secure evidence against Madame Olga, seventy-year-old fortune teller, charged with white slavery several weeks ago, turned on gas jets in the room. She was found lying unconscious on the floor by Patrolman Lawrence J. Nihan.

The girl was rushed to the Lynn Hospital, but, revived in the ambulance.

Miss Dowling was arrested with another girl in a raid on the New Oxford House by police three months ago, but was released on probation, provided she lived at her home in Salem. Recently the police learned she was again rooming in Lynn with the girl taken in the raid and the parole board ordered her arrest.

"They kept reminding me at home of what I had done," the girl told the probation officer who made the arrest, "and I couldn't stand it. That is why I came back to Lynn."

Her assistance proved of great help to the police in getting evidence of the activities of Madame Olga, who, it was charged, under the guise of fortune telling, made the acquaintance of young girls and urged them into white slavery.

Lipton is now sixty-six years of age, has two children in need of his assistance, and, if released, intends to go back to his home in New Jersey.

SOLDIERS RETURN HOME

The first unit of the Massachusetts National Guard to return from the border arrived shortly before noon today, when the special train bearing Field Hospital Company No. 1 arrived at the Ruggles street yards of the New Haven road.

Through some misunderstanding, no official word was received from El Paso giving the time the train might be expected, and there were few present when the special pulled in.

IN GOOD CONDITION.

The men go to the Allston Armory later this afternoon to be mustered out of the service by Captain Edward Brown of the regular army, who is stationed at Fort Strong.

The men were welcomed home by Colonel Williams, surgeon-general of Massachusetts, and Major H. C. Hunter.

The men, who are commanded by Major John B. R. Woodworth, arrived home in good condition. They left El Paso last Tuesday. The train consisted of two Pullmans, one cook car, three flat cars and three box cars.

GOT VILLA AND LOST HIM.

The sides of the cars were covered with inscriptions written in chalk. One of the signs read: "We Got Villa's Goat." Another, "We Got Villa, but We Lost Him."

The officers of the company, in addition to Major Woodworth, are Captain F. O. King, Lieutenants Sumner C. Anderson, C. P. Brown and R. J. Carpenter.

The company brought back no horses, with the exception of two, belonging to the officers. There were eight wagons in the outfit. One of the members of the company, whose home is in Rhode Island, was found to be suffering from appendicitis and left the train at Providence.

LANSING DENIES VILLA LED RAID

Washington, Sept. 26.—Secretary Lansing today flatly contradicted the official report of General George Bell, Jr., that Villa was present at the raid on Chihuahua City September 16, that Carranza soldiers deserted to him and that great quantities of munitions were captured. An official announcement by Secretary Lansing stated that the State Department's information conforms to the facts as presented by the Mexican government that Villa was not in Chihuahua and that there were no desertions.

Carver's Votes in Primaries Five: All for G. O. P.

The first election returns today came from the town of Carver, where the polls closed at 10 a. m.

Five votes were cast, all Republican. The only Republican contest was that for auditor, Alonzo B. Cook got four votes, Joseph P. Brown of Brookline got one.

Steals Glasses From Benefactor

In the East Boston Court today, Daniel Mahoney, fifty years old, of No. 34 Neptune road, East Boston, was sentenced to one month in the House of Correction for stealing a pair of spectacles, valued at $3, from Mrs. Ellen Haley of No. 394 Saratoga street.

Mrs. Haley played the part of the Good Samaritan to Mahoney. According to evidence, given in court, he called at her door and asked for food.

Mrs. Haley asked him in and gave him a meal. He complained of lameness and she gave him a cane. She also gave him a quarter.

"On account of this lady's kindness, and the mean way he treated her after she had been so kind to him, I am going to send him to the House of Correction for one month," said Judge Barnes.

APPORTIONMENT CASES ARE HEARD

Springfield, Sept. 26.—Arguments in the appeals from the re-districting of Suffolk and Essex Counties were started before the full bench of the Supreme Court here today. The court held its sitting in the Hampden County Court House. James Donovan and those who protested against the reapportionment in Suffolk County were represented by Nathan Matthews.

NEW YORK TRAFFIC TIED UP BY WATER

New York, Sept. 26.—A twenty-four-inch city water main above the New York end of the Steinway tube at Vanderbilt avenue and Forty-second street burst early today, causing serious congestion of traffic for hours. The elevator shaft used by passengers was flooded. The police stopped traffic on Forty-second street, from Lexington to Madison avenue.

WILSON CASTS VOTE IN N. J. PRIMARIES

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 26.—With no demonstration marking his coming to town because the hour of his arrival was not known, President Wilson voted in the State primaries here today. He was the fourteenth registered voter to cast his ballot. The President motored from Shadow Lawn and returned to the Summer White House the same way.

SOX HOME FOR FINAL BATTLES

By JOHN W. MORAN, JR.

Off the Western rattler which pulled into Boston about noon today stepped Joe Lannin, president, and Bill Carrigan, manager, just in advance of the twenty-five or more athletes who have unquestionably landed Boston another baseball championship. With a record of sixteen games won, one tied and eight lost since they left Boston, it can fairly be said that the trip of the Red Sox was highly auspicious.

Today they have a well-earned rest period, and tomorrow tackle the Yankees led by Wild Bill Donovan. It is during this series that all Boston expects the Sox will clinch the pennant.

SEVEN GAMES TO PLAY.

The club has seven games left to play with Cap Huston's New York club and Connie Mack's Athletics. In the meantime the White Sox and Tygers are concluding their year by playing four and three games, respectively.

Both President Lannin and Manager Carrigan were inclined to silence when questioned after their arrival on the pennant prospects on the faces of the players it was plainly portrayed that success would unquestionably come to them. Not a man in the squad but what feels the pennant is already theirs. They cannot see either Chicago or Detroit in the remaining days of the race.

WATCH BRAVES GAMES.

The squad split up at once and hurried to their respective lodgings to remove the stains of travel and partake of a hearty meal. This afternoon a majority of them attended the Braves-Pirates double-header and thus got a possible line on a possible rival in the coming big clash. The Braves are not yet out of the fight for the National League pennant, they figure.

FOOTBALL SQUAD FEARS PARALYSIS

Members of the Ipswich football high squad are afraid of infantile paralysis. Today they notified their coach, Charles T. Cuddy, that they would not go to Swampscott tomorrow to play the game scheduled with Swampscott High. They gave the infantile paralysis danger as the reason.

74 Are Killed, 152 Hurt in Two Zeppelin Raids

By International News Service.

London, Sept. 26. — Seventy-four persons were killed and 152 wounded in the Zeppelin raids over England on Saturday and Monday nights, according to a revised casualty list issued by the War Office this afternoon. The damage was slight.

The Zeppelins brought down during the first raid were the L-32 and L-33, one being shot down by an aviator and the other by high angle fire. Both were of the latest and biggest type.

Thirty-eight were killed and 128 injured in Saturday's raid and thirty-six were killed and twenty-seven hurt in the second raid.

Autoist Spatters Man; Is Fined $5

For the first time in the history of the City Court, an operator of an automobile was fined today for spattering a pedestrian with mud, when Frank L. Mallahan of Bonmore road, Somerville, was found guilty of assault and battery and fined $5.

William L. Turner of Brookline, a lawyer with offices at No. 87 Milk street, was the victim of the splashing, which took place September 13 at Milk and Elm streets. Mallahan was operating an auto truck and Turner was crossing the street, when, according to the testimony, he signalled for the truck to stop.

In imposing sentence Judge Parmenter said: "It is about time drivers of automobiles should start to respect the rights of pedestrians."

NEW FINANCIAL PLAN FOR MEXICO

By STUART GODWIN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

New London, Ct., Sept. 26.—Satisfied of the inability of the Mexican commission to induce American bankers to float a loan of $100,000,000 or more, the American commissioners are prepared to submit a proposal for the establishment of a practical financial protectorate over Mexico. This was learned on high authority today. The plan is this:

To guarantee the payment of the interest and principal on a Mexican loan.

To establish an American commission to supervise the expenditures in the rehabilitation of Mexico.

To establish as a collateral issue a constabulary under the partial control of this commission for patrolling the northern section of Mexico and for the protection of the border.

GERMANS DRIVEN BACK

By SIDNEY B. CAVE,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Sept. 26.—Smashing their way forward in a series of joint assaults the allies have won a big victory on the Somme front by penetrating the important town of Combles. Desperate hand-to-hand fighting is now raging in the streets between the Anglo-French troops and the remnants of the German garrison. The British have taken more than 1,500 prisoners.

Attacking the German positions simultaneously from the north and south, the British and French vied with each other to be the first to enter Combles, the honor falling to General Haig's men.

ASSAILANT HUNTED BY POLICE

Roxbury women and girls were today in something like a state of terror, while the police of Roxbury and the whole city were exerting their utmost energies to capture the man who during the past few months has clubbed and otherwise attacked a number of women there, and whose career came to a climax in attacks Saturday and Sunday nights.

Miss Margaret Nevins of Linden avenue was struck down Saturday night. She gave the best description the police have yet secured. She said the man was not a negro, that he spoke English well, but that he had a slight foreign accent.

She also gave details of his personal appearance which the police believe might be helpful in their hunt.

Sunday night, Miss Celia Weinstock

ALLIES PENETRATE COMBLES

However, the French were able to occupy the southern outskirts and Combles cemetery on the eastern edge of the town.

To the east of Combles the Germans were rolled back from fortified villages, which they strove stubbornly to hold. By the capture of Frestcourt, a mile east of Combles by the French, the allies forged a steel ring around the town and cut the only line of communication that the Germans still held.

The Germans tried unsuccessfully to lessen the pressure on the Somme front by attacking south of Bethune. These attacks were repulsed.

The British official report follows:

"Yesterday's operations were entirely successful. The preparation for and execution of the attack by artillery and infantry showed admirable co-operation. Fifteen hundred prisoners have already reached the collecting stations and more are arriving. Much material has also been taken.

STRONG REDOUBT TAKEN.

"Further progress was made last night and this morning, a strong redoubt between Leuboeufs and Gueudecourt being taken with its garrison. Our troops entered Combles from the west and are now overwhelming all resistance there. The enemy's losses were enormous."

On the eastern front the Russians are again dinging great masses of troops against the German and Austro-Hungarian positions and violent battles have developed, particularly in the Carpathians.

Savage fighting continues at many points along the battle line in Greek Macedonia. On the western end of this front the Bulgarians made strong counter-attacks which the French, Russians and Serbians have checked.

The revolutionary movement in Greece is spreading and now extends to Crete. The commander of the Greek garrison at Corfu deserted his post and has gone to Salonica to join the revolutionaries.

Enter Combles After Terrific Night Attacks

By CHARLES F. BERTELLI.

Special Correspondent, International News Service.

Paris, Sept. 26.—Pushing forward in powerful night attacks after a strong bombardment of the German positions, the French today occupied both Combles cemetery and the outskirts of the town.

The cemetery lies on the eastern edge of Combles and there was fierce fighting over the graves and amidst the tombstones when the Germans tried to stem the French advance.

Between Bethune and the Somme River the Germans launched counter-attacks in an effort to alleviate the pressure around combles, but all were repulsed, the War office stated.

Combles lies in a hollow surrounded by hills, which rise to a height of about 500 feet. Leuze Wood and Faircment Farm, which the British captured early this month, are on one of these eminences. It is in the neighborhood of Faifemont Farm that the French and British forces met, and that the fight for the possession of Combles represented a neck-and-neck race between the allied armies.

The British are only three miles from Bapaume, the main objective of the allies.

Under blasts of artillery fire from German batteries, the British and French troops worked all night consolidating their new positions around Morval, Les Boeufs and Rancourt, to the north and south of Combles, which were taken in the assaults of Monday.

British and French guns replied to the German fire and soon the artillery duel.

Prisoners taken by the British and French troops in Monday's fighting say that the German losses have been enormous in the recent fighting, and that the morale of the Kaiser's troops left along the Somme front has been badly shaken by the terrific artillery fire and the steady advance of the Anglo-French armies.

FRESCOURT TAKEN.

The text of the communique follows:

"North of the Somme our troops arrived to the outskirts of Frescourt and captured all of the village.

"During the night our advanced detachments penetrated the cemetery of Combles, while other reconnoitering troops reached the southern outskirts of this village. One detachment captured a trench southwest of Combles, making prisoners a German company.

"At other points of the front our troops organized their newly won positions.

"The enemy strongly resisted on our right wing where he launched counter-attacks late last night against our new trenches between the Bethune road and the Somme. These counter-attacks were repulsed by our fire.

"The number of unwounded prisoners taken yesterday and actually counted so far has reached the 800 mark.

"On the right bank of the Meuse (Verdun front), the Germans yesterday launched a violent attack between the Thiaumont field work and Fleury. It was checked by our barrage and machine gun fire, inflicting serious losses on the enemy.

47 COMBATS IN AIR.

"Aviation: Yesterday our aviators fought forty-seven aerial combats on the Somme front. Five enemy machines were shot down and three others were seriously engaged and forced to descend.

"Another machine, damaged by a machine gun, lost control and descended suddenly, but it could not be observed reaching the ground.

"In the course of these combats, Sub-Lieutenant Heutaux brought down his eighth machine, Adjutant Dorme his twelfth and Adjutant Lenoir attacked an enemy triplane and after a very bitter combat brought it down, making the eleventh machine to be brought down by this pilot.

"During the night of September 24 two hundred bombs were thrown on the furnaces at Dilienger, the works at Sarre-Louis, the railroad station at Mets Sablons. Twenty-two bombs were dropped on Rembach and on the Metz-Thionville railway. In the evening of September 25 four of our aviators threw eighty-two bombs on enemy organizations at Sailly-Saillisel and the St. Vaast Wood. In the afternoon of the same day thirty projectiles were thrown on enemy bivouacs in the region of Montfaucon and Nantillois and twelve on the military establishments near Azannes.

"During the night of September 25 our aviators threw 162 bombs on the railroad station and barracks at Balsecard, as well as on the railroad station of Noyon. Fifty-two bombs were dropped on the aviation camp at Hervilly and the railroad stations of Ham, Flins and Voyennes. On the afternoon of September 25 enemy aviators threw two bombs on the sand dunes northeast of Calais. No result was achieved."

French Repulse Bulgarian Forces

By International News Service.

Paris, Sept. 26.—Efforts of the Bulgarians to check the advance of the Russo-French forces in western Greek Macedonia have been frustrated.

The French War Office in a communique on Balkan operations announced today that the French, with magnificent valor, successfully resisted the most violent attacks by Bulgarians east of Florina. North of Urnenka French and Russian soldiers engaged the Bulgarians in battle.

French Raids on the Doiran Front

By International News Service.

London, Sept. 26.—Extensive artillery and air activity is reported on the Balkan front in the following statement issued by the War Office today:

"On the Struma front the French shelled Karaska, compelling the enemy to move his camp. On the Doiran front there have been successful trench raids. Hostile artillery and aircraft are showing great activity."

WAR SUMMARY

The allies delivered another blow on the Somme today, increasing their gains of yesterday, and beginning the elimination of the Combles salient.

The towns of Lesboeufs, Morval, Fregicourt and Rancourt and a part of Combles fell into their hands, with trench systems connecting these points. There is still a portion of Combles in German hands; but it is of no value and will undoubtedly fall to the allies within a few hours.

The allies' attack was delivered from Courcellotte to the Somme, except that there was no attempt to extend the Bouchavesnes salient further into the German lines. From Flers to the Somme—with the exception of this Bouchavesnes salient—the French and British made gains. On a three-mile front the British advanced about a mile. On one two-mile front the French advanced a mile, and on another two-mile front, northwest of the canal above the Somme, they advanced almost a mile. On the four-mile front from Courcellotte to Flers, the British failed to gain.

The most important gain made by the allies yesterday—though the capture of towns was more spectacular—was their advance to the Canal du Nord, northwest of Peronne. They were about three miles from Peronne in this quarter; they advanced a mile. The threat against Peronne is proportionately more serious. The capture of Peronne—if it is captured, as seems merely a matter of time—will be worth more to the allies than all they have thus far accomplished.

There has been hard fighting on the front west and north of Saolnica, the advantage turning to the allies. The results accomplished were of minor importance, however. This campaign may yet develop into an important movement; but it is very slow in starting.

The situation in the Dobrudja is again mysterious. So far as can be judged, neither side has won any considerable victory. The Rumanians last week forced back one German wing, but by an encircling flank attack were themselves forced back in that region, and so far as now appears the fighting is still along the line established by the Rumanians as their defence of Constanza and Cernavoda.

VENIZELOS GOES TO LEAD REVOLT

By G. J. STEVENS.

Special to International News Service and London Daily Telegraph.

Athens, Sept. 26.—Athens is about to learn of a dramatic step in the political situation here, one that will shake the State.

I was an eye witness at a memorable scene in the early hours of the morning when the Liberal leader, M. Venizelos, with a small band of followers, set out. The Greek liner Hesperie left Piraeus and stood in to shore off Phalerum. M. Venizelos and Admiral Coundouriotis, chief of the Greek navy, went off in a speedy motor boat.

A considerable number of officers have left Piraeus for Canea and will be joined by many others from Spezzia.

After a stay in Crete, M. Venizelos will visit several towns and will go to Salonica.

Leonidas Emericos, owner of the National Steam Navigation Company, the richest man in Greece, has placed his whole fortune at the disposal of the national government.

London, Sept. 26.—The unrest which for weeks has been smouldering in Greece has at last burst into flame and a series of startling developments is reported in dispatches.

Having apparently failed in his efforts to influence King Constantine in favor of hostilities against the central empires, former Premier Venizelos, the allies "strong man" in Greece, has left Athens for Salonica, and it is reported, will head the growing revolutionary movement in Macedonia and Crete.

PALMER TELLS OF ALLIED DRIVE

By FREDERICK PALMER,

Accredited correspondent with the British army of the press of the United States.

At the British Front in France, Sept. 25, 11 p. m. via London, Sept. 26.—This was another great day for the Anglo-French forces' attacks. As a spectacle, it was the most splendid of all the attacks. Tonight all the ground is held in that broad path of the allies' advance and, with their right resting upon the Somme, the British have taken half of Morval, all of Lesboeufs and have advanced their line over a front of 8,000 yards to an average depth of 1,000 yards.

ARTILLERY PREPARATION.

The scene had all the intoxication of war's grandeur, if war can be said to have grandeur.

Your correspondent went forward over a ridge, which high ground the British had fought over, and to Ginchy. He walked for two miles through an area of unblasts, picking his way between batteries crashing with bursts of flame.

On the other side of the ridge he saw guns where they had never been seen before on the promised land of the lower levels which the persistent pegging off of the British had won. The guns were close up to the British infantry.

"The usual artillery preparation," said an artillery officer. Returning, the correspondent walked between tiers of guns. On every occasion one goes to see a battle his car goes farther past mile ruined villages and shell-pummelled ridges. His walk to the gallery took him today past many batteries.

FEEDING THE GUNS.

From the ruins of some old German trenches where the panorama stretched before him he had a near view of French gunners feeding shells with the dexterous mechanical precision of trained automatons into the gun breaches as grain is fed into a threshing machine.

Shortly after noon was the hour chosen for the infantry and the final intensive chorus of hell from the artillery. The ridges in front and on either side were flecked with racing sparks of flame. In sight of the correspondent at least 50,000 shells must have been fired within an hour. Far south was Mont St. Quentin, two miles from Peronne, and commanding that town on the Somme, which must fall like a ripe plum when the time comes, say the commanders.

Directly in front was Combles, another town which has come to mean much to the war imagination of England and France, where its capture seems to be regarded as of vital significance.

Whoever possesses the high ground around Combles commands the town. To the right and left was the soft blue of shrapnel smoke as a canopy for the uproar of the earth and the black smoke of high explosives. Then farther north lay the ruins of Ginchy and Guillemont, and the limbless trees that had once given their citizens shade.

SMOKE HIDES BATTLE.

For twelve miles one could see up and down that artillery-blasted desert. And under the wonderful September sunlight one lived with the fever of infantry going to the charge in unison and at an appointed time. The German, from an enormous concentration of guns, answered, once the charge began, till the tires of the German guns were lost in the smoke of their curtains which hid the infantry beyond. Were Morval, Lesboeufs and Rancourt taken? How could anyone seeing the battle tell? How could scores of sausage balloons and hundreds of aeroplanes, their wings gleaming in the brilliant silver sunshine, see what was going on in that cloud of smoke?

As the surf-lined shore tells whether the tide is ebbing or flowing, so these curtains of fire meant to protect your men and murder the enemy told of success.

BRITISH TAKE VILLAGE.

Those blue and khaki waves were accomplishing their day's work under that pall of smoke.

Across dead fields, where every moving man was under shell fire and was out of cover only on stern business, rose a signal from Morval, which told that the British infantry had reached another goal and that another village had been taken.

A man at a telephone signal station nearby called out that another strong post, which looked so important on a large scale map, had been taken.

And Lesboeufs also had been gained, according to late reports.

Late in life the body is likely to show signs of wear and often the kidneys weaken first. The back is lame, bent and achy, and the kidney action distressing. This makes people feel older than they are. Don't wait for the worst effects of bad kidneys—dropsy, gravel, hardening of the arteries or Bright's disease. Use a mild kidney stimulant. Try Doan's Kidney Pills. Thousands of elderly folks recommend them.

A Boston Example:

Mrs. J. D. Van Wart, 25 Saratoga St., says: "I suffered terribly for many years from my kidneys. My back was always aching and often was so stiff and sore that I could hardly bend one way or the other. I had such pains through my back that I was in bed for four months. The kidney secretions were irregular in passage and made me very nervous. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me."

Moderate Terms

Intelligent Piano Economy

M. STEINERT & SONS COMPANY

WE are now selling the high-class Woodbury Piano on moderate terms, making it possible for the public to get a piano, at a low price, that is an excellent musical instrument, and not merely a piece of furniture.

In many low-priced pianos all merit is sacrificed to cheapness, and the result is a piano in name only.

The Piano business is not purely commercial with us—to satisfy means more than to sell.

We are using the Woodbury Piano in our educational campaign against inferior—and from a musical standpoint—practically worthless pianos that are now being sold to people who can ill afford to lose their money.

Knowing the reputation of our house the public must also know that our endorsement of the Woodbury Piano could only be the result of our absolute knowledge of that piano's worth.

Terms, small first payment, monthly moderate partial payments as the customer desires.

Steinert guarantee with every piano.

HARVARD OPENS WAR ON INFANT PLAGUE

An appeal for blood serum for infantile paralysis treatment is the first move by the newly created Harvard Infantile Paralysis Commission at the Harvard Medical School.

The keynote of the appeal reads: "The serum is obtained from the blood of persons who have recovered from the disease. The commission therefore suggests that such persons may render a service to children now afflicted by allowing a small amount of their blood to be taken. The proceeding is without danger."

AID TO BE FREE.

The commission represents an organized movement by the Harvard medical authorities for the collection and free distribution of blood serum for treatment of poliomyelitis patients in and near Boston.

The work is to be along the same general lines as in Manhattan, where quantities of blood were contributed by those who had recovered from infantile paralysis to aid in fighting it.

Secretary Roger Pierce of the commission, who is also secretary of Harvard College, tells just what is wanted in the following announcement:

"A commission consisting of Dr. Robert W. Lovett, chairman, and professor of orthopedic surgery; Dr. Milton J. Rosenau, professor of preventative medicine and hygiene; Dr. Francis Peabody, assistant professor of medicine, and Roger Pierce, secretary, has been appointed by the Harvard Medical School for the purpose of assisting in the early recognition, treatment and study of infantile paralysis.

"The commission has undertaken this work in the endeavor to meet the increasing demands from physicians for assistance in making an early diagnosis and for serum to be used in the treatment of the earliest stages of the disease. It is not at present definitely established that the use of serum is of benefit in the treatment of the disease. In the opinion of competent authorities, however, the results thus far obtained justify its distribution to physicians for use in cases where they deem it advisable.

HOW TO HELP.

"All persons who are willing to aid by giving blood may call at any time at the Harvard Medical School Administration Building, Huntington avenue, and make inquiry for the Harvard Infantile Paralysis Commission. If this is not convenient, an expert will visit the home for the purpose of collecting the blood serum.

34 NEW CASES.

"Physicians, by telephoning to the Harvard Medical School, Back Bay 2280, and inquiring for the Infantile Paralysis Commission, may obtain an expert at any hour of the day or night who will visit a patient with the doctor to assist in the diagnosis of the case, and to administer serum if desired, the announcement adds.

Thirty-four cases of infantile paralysis were reported to the State health authorities in the twenty-four hours ending at 9 a. m. today. This brought the total this month to 522, as against 390 for the period January 1 to September 1.

Seven new cases were reported in Holyoke, bringing the total to forty-nine for the month, and Surgeon L. D. Fricks of the Federal Health Service, considerably alarmed at the situation there, hurried to Holyoke today. The proportion of cases to Holyoke now equals that in New York at its worst.

Five of today's cases were in Boston.

The State Department of Health reported these thirty-four cases:

Milton—Frank Dillon, No. 55 Maple street; ——— Nally, No. 8 Eliot street.

Nahant—Nannie Pearson, Pleasant street.

Medford—Lawton Gannong, two, No. 57 Greenleaf avenue; ——— Babcock, six, No. 109 Riverside avenue.

TEUTONS LOSE RUMANIA 'GATES'

By International News Service.

Berlin, Sept. 28.—The Vulcan and Szurduk passes, the gateways to Transylvania, have again fallen to the Rumanians. After a twenty-four-hour battle of the utmost ferocity, the Austro-German forces, which last week captured the two passes, were again thrown from the heights surrounding them and, according to official admission by the German War Office this afternoon, "were taken back last night on order."

An air raid on Bucharest and Bulgarian successes in Macedonia are also reported in the official statement.

LOSS OF COMBLES.

Combles, one of the three principal German bases on the Somme, has been virtually abandoned by the army of the Bavarian Crown Prince. In admitting officially the conquest by the allies of the villages in the Gueudecourt-Bouchavesnes line the German War Office prepared the public for the loss of Combles.

The official admission of the latest reverse on the Somme is coupled with glowing praise by the Kaiser's War Office for the "heroic troops" who, it is pointed out, are battling against the combined picked forces of the French and British armies and "the whole world's war industry, prepared during many months."

The text of the official report follows:

ATTACK BY ALLIES.

"Western front—Army group of Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria—Anglo-French infantry yesterday, which was the fourth battle day of the artillerieles between the Ancre and the Somme, launched a uniform attack.

"The fighting, which began at noon, went on until night time with the same fury.

"Between the Ancre and Faureourt L'Abbaye a hostile thrust was stifled in our fire and partly broke down before our lines.

"Successes obtained by the enemy and the conquest of the villages on the line of Gueudecourt-Bouchavesnes must be recognized, but before all we must think of our heroic troops who face the united Anglo-French principal forces and the massed employment of materials of the whole world's war industry prepared during many months.

"Near Bouchavesnes and farther south to the Somme the French charges, many times repeated, failed under the heaviest sacrifices.

SLAV FRIENDS DOWNED.

"Eastern front, army group of Prince Leopold of Bavaria—A storming assault repeated six times by strong hostile forces, near Manajlow, failed completely, and under the heaviest losses.

"A gigantic Russian aeroplane was brought down after a hard combat by one of our flyers near Borgunu. In the same district a Russian monoplane was shot down in an aerial combat.

"Front of Archduke Karl Franz Josef—In the Ludova sector fresh violent enemy attacks were launched. Further to the south separate attacks were repulsed."

PLAN TO GUARD WOMEN IN LYNN

[illegible] cities now will patrol the business section of Lynn, Chief Inspector Wilson H. Thorne announced today, as a result of the arrest of a man who is charged with a woman in that section.

A young woman, whose name is withheld, asked a stranger to direct her to H. P. Whitney Company's factory. He offered to guide her, and led her up two flights of stairs to a small room.

She got hold of a hatpin and stabbed him four times with all her might and he released her and fled. The police patrol went on duty today.

U. S. TO SPEED UP BREAD COST QUERY

By International News Service.

Washington, Sept. 26.—Reports of added increases in bread prices in various parts of the country reaching here today caused serious concern at the offices of the Federal Trade Commission. The apparent certainty of a further material advance in the price of the country's principal food made it known that consideration of the problem by Federal authorities must be hastened.

It was stated that the members of the commission, now on vacation, would hurry back to Washington. It is expected that the bread situation would be taken up for action immediately. Agents of the commission, in cooperation with the Department of Justice, are preparing a survey of bread price conditions throughout the country.

Commissioner Davies, the only member of the commission now in Washington, said today that the whole problem would be taken up and a solution sought just as soon as possible. Federal district attorneys throughout the country are reporting to the Department of Justice the actual advances in bread prices in their districts. The similarity of the advances in price in different cities and localities caused department officials to believe the increases may follow some general scheme. An effort will be made to determine at once whether a violation of the anti-trust laws is involved.

BULGARS SEIZE U. S. GOODS AT KAVALA

Athens, Greece, Sept. 26.—Tobacco valued at $15,000,000, and of which $2,000,000 worth is the property of American companies, is being removed to the interior by Bulgarians from storage warehouses at the Greek seaport of Kavala.

Admission by Dr. Louis P. Gratacap, curator of minerals of the American Museum of Natural History, that he received about $4,000 from Mrs. Emma L. Dietrich of Melrose before she became Mrs. O'Donnell and a letter by Mrs. Dietrich to a woman friend saying she would be "a——— fool" to marry again, were features of the contest over Mrs. O'Donnell's will before Judge McIntyre in the Middlesex Probate Court at East Cambridge today.

Mrs. Dietrich, rich and eccentric, was married to Dr. O'Donnell, who was forty-six, on June 15 last. She died on Sept. 1 and left her estate, $1,500 or less were turned by Mrs. O'Donnell's brother, George T. Gilbreen, with her nephew, Edgar W. Otis of Roxbury, and her niece, Adelaide Otis of Roxbury, and Mrs. Emmeline L. Martin of Somerville.

FOUR CONTESTING WILL.

These four are contesting the will on the ground that undue influence was exercised by Dr. O'Donnell. They had William H. Schurtzer for counsel. The will is dated at the Hotel Touraine, Boston, Nov. 1, 1915.

Dr. O'Donnell was seized by Mr. Schurtzer today if he received money from Mrs. Dietrich before her marriage to him. He replied that he received about $54,000. Mr. Schurtzer asked him what was the capital he had when he married Mrs. Dietrich.

"Well, I wouldn't call it that, but I netted Dr. O'Donnell, "but I suppose seven years ago I could have counted it. I had a number of bonds and stocks in leading American industries."

A letter was introduced as one written by the testator about one year before she married Dr. O'Donnell. It was to a woman friend addressed as "Kittie," and it read in part:

WOULD BE MY MONEY.

"To tell you the truth, the man is not made that I would marry. So you think I would marry for the sake of my money, which if a man wanted to marry me, it would be my money and I know it.

"I could never stand it. Thank God I am out of it. I can go where I please and nobody to ask a question. I would be a——— fool."

No explanation was offered of the letter.

Previous to this Dr. O'Donnell testified that Mrs. Dietrich's son-in-law, Mrs. Josephine Galloway, had heart trouble.

Q.—Was not Mrs. O'Donnell's condition similar? A.—No, not at all.

Q.—Did you consider it would be best on Mrs. O'Donnell's chances of life if you took a long railroad journey in the last few days? A.—I did not.

He said she had been married three times and twice divorced.

Q.—Weren't you looking on these divorce papers to make sure that Mrs. O'Donnell would be legally married? A.—No, on the contrary, I broke the engagement.

Q.—Did Mrs. O'Donnell, before coming to your cottage, look on automobiles? A.—No, I thought it but she was to have the use of it. She paid $1,000 for the machine price and I thought that too much, so I gave her a note for $500 and never learned that note as a Christmas gift.

Q.—Did you give her other things? A.—She got a diamond ring and a gold watch and chain.

In spite of their marriages in Vermont, they returned to Boston and on the evening on the day of their marriage—of the will now under contest. Then they started for the Yellowstone on their honeymoon and she died before they reached Utah.

Ready for Fall

An Exposition of Model Clothes for men and young men —strikingly individual in its style features and worthy the attention of the most critical dressers of the day.

There's an exclusive smartness to the lines of Georges SUITS and TOP COATS—due in a great measure to their faithful portrayal of the latest creations of Fifth Avenue's leading style originators—as produced by our own New York custom shops.

The newest style feature of this season is the original combination of the double-breasted Sack front with the Norfolk back and loose or stationary belt effect. This style is shown in both Suits and Top Coats and has proven an instantaneous hit.

Materials are more varied in pattern and colorings than ever before. Tweeds and cheviots are very popular, flannels are in great demand in the new rich turtle greens, wood browns and military and stone blues. Neat stripes also continue in high favor.

MRS. DENNISON TELLS OF ORDEAL

Dixville Notch, N. H., Sept. 26.—Mrs. Joseph A. Dennison, who with her husband was lost in the woods for three nights east of here, told today for the first time her own story of the terrible ordeal.

She told how they spent three nights in the forest before they reached the shack where they were found; and how, as she lay exhausted in that shack, the words of "Lead, Kindly Light" kept running through her mind, and how, half delirious from exhaustion as she was, her rescuers at first appeared to her almost like angels—persons from another world.

Those who rescued the couple will divide between them close to $3,000, except for certain expenses that must be paid, it became known today. It was an extra offer of $500 reward that resulted in their being brought out of the woods so promptly after being located.

ACHES AND PAINS.

Mrs. Dennison told her story as she lay, weary but happy, in bed at the Balsams here. More than once there were tears in her eyes as she spoke. And here, in her own words, is her story.

"We're back again. That is about all I can think of. And now that it is all over I am just beginning to be conscious of all my aches and pains and my countless bruises. It seems futile to attempt to describe it.

"The only way you could get any conception of what even the darkness is like would be to just walk a little way beyond the hotel after it becomes dark tonight. It is as black as pitch in those woods. We actually could not see each other's faces. The first night, Wednesday night, it seemed to come on us all of a sudden; descended just like a blanket and enveloped us, and we knew it would be worse than folly to move until daybreak.

"How did I ever stand it? I didn't do it alone. Something above and beyond me kept me up. I cannot take the credit for it myself, because I do not feel I could have done it alone.

"GOD GAVE ME STRENGTH."

"I know God gave me additional strength to bear the additional burden.

"I never once felt hungry. We both had but one thought—the desire to get out. I did not dare to mention a fear because I did not dare to weaken my husband's courage. I seemed to know that if I collapsed he would be all gone. I knew he could not go on and leave me in some unmarked spot where there would be no hope of coming back to me. I knew I must push on. I was weary. I ached. Every step was painful.

"The report that we reached the shack and slept there Friday night was a mistake. We did not reach here until Saturday morning. Mr. Dennison fixed me up a bed with a mattress and two chairs. I saw he was very weak as he did it, although I said nothing, and he would not have admitted he felt other than all right, anyway. He then went out to reconnoitre. He was gone over five hours. When he returned I began to fear for his strength even as much as my own.

BEGAN TO RAIN HARD.

"It was a terribly black, gloomy morning, and when it began to rain hard we decided the best thing would be to rest under cover that day and for him to start out fresh in the morning. He lay down on another mattress and soon fell into a deep slumber that was more a stupor than anything else. I was glad to see him sleep, although I could not even get dozy. I seemed to have got beyond the thought of either eating or sleeping. As I lay there the words of 'Lead, Kindly Light,' returned to my mind. I repeated the first verse:

"The night is dark and I am far from home, Lead Thou me on."

"That verse must have remained in my mind an hour, when, suddenly I thought I heard human voices. I listened for a moment and then thought it was a delusion. I had listened and hoped so long I could no longer trust my ears. Again came the sound. 'Joe!' I called, but even my call did not rouse him. Again I heard the voices, even distinguished the conversation as to whether or not they would come into the shack.

"I called my husband again, and this time he woke. We both looked at the door, which was cut out at the bottom. We saw no rubber boots. The next instant the door opened and our rescuers walked in. 'Thank God!' exclaimed my husband, and I burst into tears, the first I had shed.

TEARS OF JOY.

"My husband tried to comfort me, and put his arms around me.

"'Don't feel badly,' I sobbed. 'They are tears of joy—the happiest tears I ever shed.' He paused, her eyes grew very moist, and her mouth was drawn in a firm straight line.

"You see,' she smiled through the tears, 'my prayer was answered. It was not God's will that we were to die that way.

"But,' she added, 'long before that I had become almost serene. I was ready to die if God meant it so.'

Various Forms Of Headache

"It is necessary in order to treat headaches properly to understand the causes which produce the affection," says Dr. J. W. Gay, of Blockton, A.'a. Continuing he says, "Physicians cannot even begin the treatment of a disease without knowing what causes give rise to it, and we must remember that headache is to be treated according to the same rule. We must not only be particular to give a remedy intended to counteract the cause which produces the headache, but we must also give a remedy to relieve the pain until the cause of the trouble has been removed. To answer this purpose, anti-kamnia tablets will be found a most convenient and satisfactory remedy. One tablet every one to three hours gives comfort and rest in the most severe cases of headache, neuralgia and particularly the headaches of women.

"When we have a patient subject to regular attacks of sick headache, we also caution him to keep his bowels regulated, for which nothing is better than "Seidlitz," and when he feels the least sign of an oncoming attack, he should take two A-K Tablets. Such patients should always be instructed to carry a few anti-kamnia tablets, so as to have them ready for instant use. These tablets are prompt in action and can be depended on to produce relief in a very few minutes." Ask for A-K Tablets.

Roper's Trial Is Delayed by Juror's Illness

Because of the illness of Juror Robert P. Hunter of Somerville, the trial of Albert J. Roper on the charge of murdering his father, Albert Roper, which has been in progress in East Cambridge, was adjourned today till tomorrow.

The juror is suffering from indigestion and was expected to be able to continue his duties tomorrow.

Mrs. Jessie Fox, who was the principle witness at the trial yesterday, will resume the stand when court opens tomorrow.

It is believed that her ten-year-old daughter Dorothy will follow her mother as a witness.

Mrs. Fox testified that Roper told her February 14 that his father had died, and that he could not go home because of a snowstorm. A few days later he returned with a mourning band on his arm, she said.

The actual death of Mr. Roper occurred the evening of March 1, when his body was found in his greenhouse in Tewksbury.

ASK CLERGY TO AID COLUMBUS DAY PLAN

The clergymen of Boston have been asked to do their part in making the Columbus Day celebration, October 12, a success, by calling attention to the day at the services in their churches the Sunday preceding the holiday. The official celebration will include patriotic exercises with a flag raising on Boston Common in the morning, a Columbus commemoration meeting in Faneuil Hall in the afternoon and a Pan American meeting in the evening.

ASK BAN ON 'WHERE ARE MY CHILDREN'

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 26.—The Protestant clergymen of this city have protested against the presentation of "Where Are My Children?" which is booked at a local theatre for the latter part of this week. The Rev. C. Le V. Brine, rector of Christ Church, has protested to Mayor Ladd in a communication signed by himself and his vestrymen. It is the first time here that the Mayor has been asked to act as a censor for moving pictures.

VICTIM TELLS HOW PRETTY GIRL LED HIM INTO BLACKMAIL TRAP

By International News Service.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Amazing disclosures of how he was swindled out of $15,000 by members of the so-called million-dollar blackmail syndicate, who caught him in a compromising position with one of the band's "come-ons" in the Ansonia Hotel, New York, were made here today by Edward R. West, a wealthy Hyde Park importer.

The woman with whom he was trapped was Buda Godman, a striking brunette, who, it is charged, with Helen Evers, did the luring for the syndicate. She was under arrest here today, awaiting preliminary hearing of other members of the ring.

West is a widower and wealthy. He is vice-president of V. D. Gregg Tea and Coffee Company of Chicago and New York.

In order that others may take heed and profit by his humiliating experience, West said he decided to make public the details of his case.

TELLS OF MEETING.

"I met Buda Godman in a downtown restaurant," said West.

"She was beautiful, polished and I was led to believe that she had independent means of her own. We became very good friends. Shortly after our acquaintanceship had ripened into friendship, I was called to New York on a business trip for my firm.

"She suggested that she make the trip with me. I was surprised, as I thought she was a girl of refinement. At first I refused; then at her insistence I agreed to it. We reached New York on May 9 and registered at the Ansonia Hotel.

"We had been there several days. One night, or rather morning, there came a knock on our door. I opened it and in came three men. They were armed with warrants for our arrest. They had badges and 'credentials,' which I now know to have been false, showing they were agents of the department of justice. They said we had violated the Mann act.

GIRL HYSTERICAL.

"I told them it was an outrage and that I would not submit to it. But Buda became hysterical. She said it meant ruin for her, that she was a convent-reared girl, and it would kill her parents.

"She sobbed that it was all right for me, a man, to talk of fighting it but that society would forgive a man where it put an irremovable blemish on a woman. She threatened to commit suicide. Then she became calmer and asked what she could do to save herself.

"I was intimated by the three 'officers' that money might settle it. What was I to do? A girl of apparent culture had been placed in this position and it was up to my chivalry if nothing else to get her out.

IN TWO INSTALMENTS.

"We were taken to two staterooms under guard and hurried to Chicago. We went to the Alexandria Hotel, where I was informed United States Commissioner Foote lived. A hundred times I threatened to revolt and let everything go, but Buda pleaded that it meant ruin for her. I believed in her. We were held there for several days while the so-called 'negotiations' went on.

"Then I paid them—in cash. The first instalment was $12,500. Then I gave them $2,509. When the expose of their organization came I knew I had been 'bled' and I decided to sacrifice my personal humiliation for the sake of others who may innocently be drawn into the same net."

West declared that the persons with whom he was associated in the deal, and whom he now knows to be blackmailers, were persons who would fool anyone.

They were polished, he said, and educated. Their language and manners would deceive anyone.

Buda Godman, the woman in the case, formerly was the wife of Tels Tayler, a song writer, according to officials here.

JOY CHASED AWAY BY OLD MR. GLOOM

Two men started out for a hunt, in Revere today, and struck luck—good and bad—right away.

The good luck was this: As they were crossing a farm in North Revere a deer ran past them—and they shot and killed it.

The bad luck followed: A policeman, summoned by telephone, arrested them for unlawfully killing the deer. And they face the Chelsea court today.

They are John De Stasio of No. 45 Elmwood street, Revere, and Joseph Vaci of No. 65 Beach road, Revere.

WALTHAM MAN IS HELD AFTER THEFT

If anything goes it goes with Francis Goodwin of Waltham. When he was six he appropriated a horse and wagon, which he drove to Boston. Later he went rowing up the Charles River in a life boat of the Metropolitan Park Commission. Francis next took to automobiles. In Waltham court today he was found guilty of taking James T. Silman's auto from its garage, saying Silman said he could. This case was filed. But, for operating the machine without a license, Francis was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction.

PRIMARY WARDEN IS REMOVED

The first trouble in today's primaries came at the polling booth of precinct 4, Ward 5, in the West End, where Warden John Lambert was removed by Chairman John Minton of the Election Board on complaint of Senator James I. Green of Charlestown that Lambert did not live in the ward.

Senator Green is a candidate for his third term in the Second Suffolk Senatorial district, which includes Charlestown and West End wards. He is opposed for the Democratic nomination by John I. Fitzgerald and former Representative Michael McGrath has secured the Martin Lomasney machine of working against him and for Fitzgerald.

The Senator was covering his district for the primaries in an automobile. He rode up at noon to the voting booth of precinct 4, Ward 5, which is on Minot street, near the Boston & Maine freight sheds. Lambert was presiding as warden and voting was brisk.

GREEN SEES LAMBERT.

The moment Senator Green spied Lambert he shouted: "You've no right here. You live in Charlestown."

Lambert retorted that he lived on Bowdoin street in the West End.

Commissioner Minton named Chief Inspector Charles Celeste to succeed Lambert. Senator Green said:

"I am getting a raw deal. If I lose by such methods as are being played in this ward I shall have something to say tomorrow about the thugging and thievery going on in this district."

The reports are in from most districts where some local fight brought out the voters was everywhere the same—light or only average voting.

RUMORS OF KNIFING.

There was only one fight of real State-wide interest. That was the contest between Frederick W. Mansfield and Charles H. Cole for the Democratic nomination for Governor. Cole had the support of the Democratic organizations, but there were many rumors that he would be secretly knifed.

The only other contest on the State tickets was that between Auditor Alonzo B. Cook and Joseph H. Brown of Brookline for the Republican nomination for auditor.

In the Congressional contests, there were a number of fights which served to stimulate interest in the third, seventh, eighth, eleventh, fourteenth and sixteenth districts.

THE MIDDLESEX CONTEST.

Middlesex County had an interesting contest for the Republican nomination for District Attorney. Nathan A. Tufts of Waltham, former Representative and former Senator, and as prominent as a football official as he is a legislator and attorney, sought the nomination against Nelson P. Brown of Everett, Philip M. Clark of Newton and John J. Higgins of Somerville—the latter District Attorney in the days of the power of the "Middlesex Ring."

East Boston was one of the localities where a fairly good vote was cast. This was explained by the fact that Frederick W. Mansfield, as well as William F. Doyle—the latter a candidate for the nomination as Register of Deeds in Suffolk County—are East Boston born.

District fights added neighborhood interest. Ward 1 had a six-cornered scrap for the two places in the House. Representatives Thomas J. Giblin and Edward L. Kelley were elected last year. Giblin has since moved into Ward 2. Kelley ran today for renomination and Arthur H. Stout, Thomas A. Winston, George Payne, James Collins and John F. Gilleaple were the other five candidates. Precinct 8 of Ward 1 showed 135 votes cast by 8:30.

ALL QUIET IN WARD 8.

Everything was quiet in Ward 8, with only an average vote being cast in the morning hours. Interest centred in the three-cornered senatorial fight, where the candidates are John I. Fitzgerald, Ex-Senator James J. Green and Michael McGrath. Martin M. Lomasney was not in evidence during the early part of the day and there was an entire absence of excitement about the voting booths.

$50,000 Ty Cobb "comes back" Nuxated Iron makes him Winner..Greatest Baseball

Batter of all time says Nuxated Iron filled him with renewed life after he was weakened and all run down

Well known physician who has studied widely in this country and Europe, explains why taking iron enabled Ty Cobb to "come back" so quickly and show such tremendous strength and endurance. Says ordinary nuxated iron will often increase the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous folks 200 per cent. in two weeks' time.

New York, N. Y.—When interviewed in his apartment at Bretton Hall, Ty Cobb said: "Hundreds of people write to me to know how I train and what I do to keep up that force and vitality which enables me to play practically every day of the entire baseball season. They wonder why I can play a better game today than when I was younger.

"The secret is keeping up the supply of iron in my blood. Exactly what everyone else can do if they will.

"At the beginning of the present season I was nervous and run down from a bad attack of tonsilitis, but soon the papers began to state: 'Ty Cobb has 'come back.' He is hitting up the old stride.' The secret was iron—Nuxated Iron filled me with renewed life.

"Now they say I'm worth $50,000 a year to any baseball team, yet without plenty of iron in my blood I wouldn't be worth five cents. Nuxated Iron supplies that 'vim, vigor and vitality' strength and vim that makes men of mars and women of Venus."

Continuing, Dr. Sauer said: "Mr. Cobb's case is only one of hundreds which I could cite from my own personal experience, which proves conclusively the astonishing power of nuxated iron to restore strength and vitality even in most complicated chronic conditions."

Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret he said was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 45 he was careworn and nearly all in. Now at 50 a miracle of vitality and he fairly bounding with the buoyancy of youth. As I have said a hundred times over, iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart trouble, etc. The real and iron cause which started the diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly, looking just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron, simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.—E. Sauer, M. D.

Nuxated Iron has filled me with renewed life and vigor; I play a better game today than when I was younger.

Tyrus R. Cobb

NOTE—Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. Sauer, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by many physicians everywhere. Unlike the older forms of iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach, on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists.

BOVA PROTESTS DI COLA'S WILL

An indignant protest was made by Antonio Bova today that his mother was not bequeathed more than $100 a month and the use of a house by the will of Gaspare Di Cola, the murdered "Lemon King."

Bova is the West End and Waltham barber who declared, after the assassination of Di Cola in Brookline, last Wednesday night, that the woman known here for years as "Mrs. Di Cola" was really his mother, that she was Mrs. Antonina Ba Bova Conti and that, as Bova told it, she eloped with Di Cola to this country.

Bova's story clashes in one important particular with his mother's divorce argument. She was granted a divorce from Conti at Dedham last December on the ground that Mariano Bova Conti deserted her at Pittsburgh in 1891, whereas her son says that she eloped with Di Cola from Italy about thirty years ago.

BOVA QUESTIONED.

Bova went to his work in Waltham today as usual, after being subjected to a midnight grilling by three detectives, headed by "Joe" Ferrari of Hanover street station.

The grilling apparently didn't worry Bova so much as the injustice which he thought Di Cola had done his mother in willing her only the use of the Brookline home, about $3,200 cash, some jewelry and an income of $100 a month, to be paid by his brother, Giuseppi, who inherits the bulk of the quarter million dollar estate.

Speaking of his mother's circumstances now, Bova said today:

WOULD SEE MOTHER.

"I do not think that my mother received enough under Di Cola's will. It is not right that she should get so little when he was so rich. I am not interested myself. I expect nothing. Rather I would like to help my mother.

"I would like to see mother. I shall see her again. But I shall wait a while in order to hear from her first. I fear that she may go to another city. I think she will be better off to stay in Boston and Brookline."

The interrogation of Bova by the detective trio was a further effort to get new light on the Di Cola assassination.

The grilling lasted almost three hours but failed to shake Bova's story. The detectives met Bova at 10 o'clock, just before he was leaving the barber shop of A. Algieri at No. 885 Main street, Waltham, where he is employed.

They took him to the Waltham station. There they questioned him at considerable length and then hustled him into an automobile. They drove to Brookline, past the scene of the murder and to the Brookline police station. Meanwhile they plied him with questions, laying bare his life and all he knew of the elopement of his mother, the wife of another man, and Di Cola.

They pressed him for the details of his movements on the night of the murder. From Brookline they rushed him to Station 1 on Hanover street. At almost 1 a. m. they allowed him to go to his home.

The grilling of Bova is the latest development in a mystery, which, abounding with thrills and romance, has baffled Boston and Brookline police and seems destined to pass into history as one of Boston's great unsolved crimes.

"Do you ever carry a gun," was a question fired at Bova. "Never," answered the barber. The detectives skillfully slapped and bumped against him as they aided him into the auto, in an effort to see if he had one about his person.

NAT GOODWIN HEADLINER AT KEITH'S

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE—Nat C. Goodwin joked about wives, told stories and took four hearty curtain calls and an encore at the opening matinee at Keith's. It was his first appearance in Boston in vaudeville.

The "wife" quips eaised laughter particularly. He recalled the census-taker who asked him "Married, single or divorced?" "Yes," said Goodwin.

His stories of the English idea of American humor, of the independent cabman and the persuasive story-teller were told as they should be.

For his encore he offered "Gunga Din." In the recitation he showed the actor, the finished artist, and the applause was especially hearty.

Mr. Goodwin's English accent went particularly well, as he ranged from the Piccadilly dread of the clubman down to the broad Cockneyism of the "cabbie" and the rough sentiment of the soldier who tells of "Gunga Din." The audience evidently wished his act longer.

The surrounding bill was diversified and strong. It included the Hearst International News Pictorial; Frank Le Dent, juggler; Wells, Norworth and Moore, lively specialty; Merian cantatrices; Wood and Wyde, well named as "That's All Right"; "Prosperity," an uplift skit, with Vera Matthews; the Leightons, with Honolulu trimmings; Walter Shannon, Marie Annis and company, in a colorful romance on the Nile, and the Bellecliaires, in athletics.

ORPHEUM THEATRE—Leading the excellent vaudeville bill yesterday were a pair of favorites in Boston, the Wilson Brothers. Thoroughly original in their methods, they are equally effective in producing the heartiest of laughter. The repetition their catch-line, "to out," was the sure-fire signal for explosions of mirth. Another big attraction on the bill was the act of W. J. Holmes and Iva Holliston in their comedy playlet, "Looking for Betsy." The leading player finds opportunity to enact the light-house scene from "Shore Acres," in which he plays the two roles of the contending brothers.

FENWAY THEATRE — That the patrons of this theatre enjoy good singing was proven again last evening by the splendid ovation given DeWitt Cairns, baritone, and Arthur Hinkling, tenor. Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance" delighted all present and the famous Japanese actor, Sessue Hayakawa, in the great Paramount play "The Honorable Friend," which is the attraction of the show, was the subject of unlimited praise as the big audience filed from the theatre.

ST. JAMES THEATRE—It would be difficult to choose a better quality of entertainment than that presented yesterday. For a head-liner the management offered that perpetual favorite, "School Days," a juvenile musical comedy, presented by a clever cast of nine people. The act is one of the best in vaudeville and worth going a long ways to see.

OLYMPIA THEATRE—There were the usual full houses yesterday, where an excellent double bill of film plays was offered, in addition to a fine program of vaudeville, containing six star acts. And there was the music, selections by the Philharmonic Orchestra. The films introduced the famous dancers, Maurice and Florence Walton, to the public as screen artists, in "The Quest of Life," a Paramount feature which furnished opportunity for the dancers to show their art. The other film introduces Emily Stevens, the famous Broadway actress, in a strong feature play, "The Wheel of the Law," which illustrates the danger of convictions for crime upon purely circumstantial evidence.

Plays That Remain

PARK SQUARE THEATRE—This is the last week but one of "Hit-the-Trail Holliday," George M. Cohan's delightful comedy, which is now in the height of its popularity.

TREMONT THEATRE — "Civilization began its final fortnight yesterday. The announcement of the closing date of the engagement has served to make the demand for seats livelier than ever, and yesterday saw two crowded houses.

MAJESTIC THEATRE—The opening of the last week of "Where Are My Children" in Boston saw record audiences yesterday. After three months of continuous interest in the piece on the part of the local public, the patronage seems to suffer no diminution on the eve of its departure.

SHUBERT THEATRE—An extension of the local engagement of "Katinka" of just one week more did not affect the attendance at last night's performance, which was large and enthusiastic, as usual. This clever collaborative masterpiece by Hauerbach and Friml—the modern Gilbert and Sullivan of musical shows—seems able to delight Bostonians indefinitely.

COLONIAL THEATRE—There were no vacant seats last evening when the curtain rose on the opening of the second week in this city of the tenth edition of "Ziegfeld Follies."

GLOBE THEATRE—Pathetic, almost tawdry, as is the story of "The Little Girl Next Door," its lessons for Bostonians seem to be sufficiently alluring to attract large audiences every day, where continuous showings of the film have been going on since September 7.

WILBUR THEATRE—"Very Good Eddie" appears as good to the management, from a box-office point of view, as it does to the spectators as a musical show. And the only difference in conditions noted last night when the eighth week of the engagement began, was that the standing room as well as the seats was all taken.

What's There?

Whole wheat is sweet, but when you add the zest of malted barley you have a flavor that no food made of wheat alone possesses.

The famous food, Grape-Nuts, has a delightful taste that everybody likes, and it lies in the "magic of the malt"—

Then, too, malted barley contains, besides its great nourishing qualities, a digestive which makes Grape-Nuts food particularly satisfying to weak, as well as strong stomachs.

Ready to eat, easy to digest, delicious—every table should have its daily ration of

Grape-Nuts

WELCH STARS AT CASTLE SQUARE

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE—Joe Welch, the Hebrew character comedian, took the Castle Square Theatre by storm yesterday when he appeared in "The Peddler." Joe was greeted by many of his Boston friends and his performance was very creditable.

The story the play tells is about a Hebrew peddler of the lower East Side of New York. He has an erring son and a faithless wife, and as the scenes pass from the Bowery to the uptown districts the audience sees a series of entertaining portrayals of the varied life of the metropolis.

Mr. Welch represents Abraham Jacobson as a thoroughly likable man. There is nothing offensive in his impersonation of the Jewish character, and in all the episodes of the play, melodramatic as well as comic, he awakens the sympathies of the audience.

In addition to Mr. Welch the play is well interpreted, especially by Miss Jane Moro in the role of Salome Wyandotte. Others in the cast are Harrison Roberts, Paul Hamlin, F. E. Elliott and Ada Dalton.

Next week the play will be "The Devil's Harvest," written by Edward E. Rose.

PARK THEATRE—Thomas W. Lawson's famous play, "Friday, the 13th," featuring Robert Warwick, the popular star, heads the bill this week. The story opens with Judge Sands bankrupt, because Peter Brownley has given him a false tip on the market. Sands invests all his own and money from an estate of which he is trustee; discouraged he is about to commit suicide when his daughter enters. She hears all and vows vengeance against the Brownleys. She secures a position as secretary to elder Brownley. Then she learns many of their secrets and helps her father to win back his fortune. In the meantime young Brownley is very deeply in love with his father's secretary and they run away and get married, which reunites the Brownleys and Judge Sands.

GAIETY THEATRE—In the Behman Show this week the patrons have the opportunity of seeing one of the first line burlesque shows of the season. The company is a very large one and presents the show in two acts and twelve scenes. The piece is a humorous sketch from the pen of Jimmie McCree, whose work is familiar to all burlesque patrons. The first act is called "The Family Trenches," which affords Wilbur Cushman and John R. Cain, the comedians, an opportunity for clever work. Bubbs is probably one of the funniest German comedians on the burlesque stage today. John Cain is a prime second for honors and is an excellent mate for Dubbs. Sam Hyams, Jack Nichols, Dud Snyder and Blutch Landolf all do good work in the parts they have. Lucille Manion, a clever woman, has the leading feminine role and was given a hearty welcome yesterday.

BOSTON THEATRE—Anita Stewart in "The Combat," and Florence LaBadie in "The Fear of Poverty," both shown for the first time in Boston, head the picture program offered this week. The fourth episode of "The Yellow Menace," with Margaret Gale and Edwin Stevens, is also shown for the first time in this house. "The Combat" is the story of an ambitious society mother, who plans to wed her beautiful young daughter to a wealthy man, as a solution to her own financial difficulties. The daughter, played by Anita Stewart, is ignorant of her mother's financial distress, and falling in love with a handsome young mining engineer, they are secretly wed.

WALDRON'S CASINO—The public demand for the season's theatrical craze—Hawaiian songs and dances—is satisfactorily answered by Manager Fred Irwin in his latest and most pretentious production, the relcsing attraction this week. The Irwin Big Show is the title and the entertainment is all that the name implies. "The South Sea Shore" number, one of the pronounced hits, is presented by the pretty and dainty Sherlock sisters, Ollie and Flo, and it was demanded many times. The sisters are ably assisted by the Irwin chorus of Irwin beauties, who are frequently in evidence throughout the whole show.

BEACON THEATRE—A new theatre greeted the eyes of the patrons of this popular playhouse yesterday. There is so much to delight the eye, and so much that caters to the comfort of the patron, as well as the perfection attained in seating arrangements and ventilation that it may be said that this is the most modern playhouse in New England. The color scheme of the decorations is quite soothing to the eye, and every seat is so arranged that a perfect straight line view may be had of the picture on the screen.

MODERN THEATRE—It is a wonderfully good mixed bill of first-run features that was shown yesterday, a man and a woman star heading each photoplay. In the William Fox production, "Fires of Conscience," William Farnum is seen in a role that fits him perfectly. Replete with romance of the present day, it tells of a man who has an inward fight with himself and an outward fight with his enemies.

Coming Events

PARK SQUARE THEATRE—The announcement that "Buried Treasure," a new comedy by Rida Johnson Young, is the next attraction is welcome news to local playgoers. First, because the piece is staged by Cohan and Harris, and secondly, because it will be the initial metropolitan performance of the play, which opens here on October 9 for an engagement of three weeks only.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE—"The Silent Witness," Otto Hauerbach's drama, which has had a prosperous stay in New York at both the Longacre and Fulton theatres, will be presented here for the first time tomorrow night. This play's stay here is limited to four and one-half weeks, and it is then planned to take it back to New York again. It had to leave the Fulton Theatre there because of other bookings for that house.

COPLEY THEATRE—As the opening attraction of the present repertory season, which will be inaugurated Saturday night, the Henry Jewett Players will present George Bernard Shaw's keenly satirical three comedy, "You Never Can Tell." An exceptionally well balanced cast will be seen, many of the players having appeared in Shaw's plays in England.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE—Next Monday evening will see this playhouse open for its regular Fall and Winter season, and there will be more to be a lively interest in the initial attraction, which will be "His Honor, the Mayor," by Augustus Thomas. This was one of the most important of the Charles Frohman productions last season and had long runs in both New York and Chicago. Now it comes to Boston for an engagement with Frank Gaynor, Amelia Gardner, William Ingram, Rose Rutter and others of the original favorites.

HUDSON SETS NEW RECORD TO COAST

San Francisco, Sept. 26.—In the first round trip ever made in ocean run to be made by any automobile around the world, the Hudson Super-Six, which reached here Sunday morning, in both the going and return trips broke the best previous one-way records.

The round trip from San Francisco to New York was made in 15 days 21 hours 3 minutes.

Last Spring the best one-way record from coast to coast was 7 days 3 hours. The Super-Six used was a seven-passenger touring car and carried at all times 3, and sometimes 4 passengers. Previous one-way records were established with roadster and stripped models.

On the return trip the car was 1½ hours ahead of its going schedule up to within 250 miles of the finish, on account of heavy rains in crossing the Sierra, Nevada Mountains. 12 hours more time was required to cover that leg than was taken in the going trip.

The average speed going and coming, including all stops, and slowing down to meet requirements of more than 250 cities, towns and villages passed through each way, was close to 200 miles a day.

Three writers, Ralph Mitford, A. H. Patterson and Charles Vincent, by making train jumps, piloted the car in its round trip across the continent, swain.

ONE FRESHIE IN SHORT TROUSERS

Knickerbockers are the crowning glory of John Cook Dowd, Harvard freshman, who is the only man in the entering class who delights in the possession of a pair of short pants.

Dowd hails from Troy and is fifteen years of age. He graduated from the high school of that city last June with flying colors.

Dowd intends to try to wear his knickers through his freshman year. No amount of "kidding" or "badgering," he believes, will be able to cause him to reconsider his decision.

Dowd says that he expects to attend strictly to the business of studying while at Harvard. His smallness would prevent him from trying for athletic teams, except on the crew, where he would fit nicely as a coxswain.

"—For the Apparel Oft Proclaims the Man"

—Shakespeare

THE association of the greatest name in literature with the name of good clothes is indeed a striking one.

For after all it takes good literature to make good clothing known, and the two have ever been inseparable.

There is hardly a play from the immortal pen of the great genius but contains allusion to clothes—to good clothes, and to the importance of quality to good appearance.

And were Shakespeare with us on this, his three hundredth, anniversary he would appreciate, we believe, the spirit which links his name with that of

PLAYING THE WORLD'S SERIES WITH HUGH S. FULLERTON

Here is the third of a series of expert articles on the World's Series games by Hugh S. Fullerton, the celebrated baseball statistician, in which he compares the centre fielders who may take part in the great title contests. Fullerton's World's Series stories will be a feature of the daily and Sunday AMERICAN.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Comparing the centre fielders of the three clubs of each league that have fought such desperate campaigns for the honors of meeting in the World's Series, it becomes evident at a glance that the National clubs should, for their own interests, be pulling for anyone to beat the Detroit Tigers.

Ty Cobb towers head and shoulders above all the other centre fielders in the country, and this fact never becomes more evident than when one sits down and figures the worth of the man in plain figures.

It would be fortunate for Cobb if Brooklyn should win the pennant because, figuring him against that Dodger team, it would seem a shame for him to be turned loose on the bases against their catchers, at the bat against their pitchers (excepting Coombs, who is the only one to stop Cobb).

The pitchers and catchers of both the Braves and the Phillies figure to do more toward stopping Cobb than do the Brooklyn hitters. It would be almost a one-man series if Cobb should be turned loose against Brooklyn to show the Dodgers how this old army game should be played.

He would start them throwing and keep them throwing all the time, and anyone who has watched the Dodgers heave that old pill around the grandstand knows what would happen.

DODGERS PANICKY CLUB.

As we study the six teams in comparison with each other, position for position, the one fact that becomes more and more clear is, with all its hitting and base running power, Brooklyn is one of the most panicky ball clubs in the league. It is the one along three or four innings as steady as anyone, then blow up to pieces and throw away the game.

This panicky tendency seems to extend all along the line. I am unable to place the blame entirely, but there is an extreme lack of faith in each other that is bred of this habit, and each man is constantly expecting someone else to blow, and, as a consequence, just what they all look for happens often enough to ruin the confidence of a team which otherwise might seem very strong.

I find this affecting Chief Wilson of Johnston, who is brilliant and erratic by turns. He was not good enough to be considered seriously when he was on the "Big Show" before, and really is not yet finished with his play on a championship team. He is improving and should continue to improve—but that does not help much in the present contingency.

Dode Paskert really is the class of the centre fielders the National League could offer against the American, when only these three teams are considered. He is a fine, all-round outfielder, covering a lot of ground, throwing and batting well, and he hits very well—close up to .290.

Yet compared with Cobb, Paskert is a mediocre outfielder to seem more better than an amateur. Compared with the average, Paskert looks very well. He is no one's comfort ball player, and has a lot of deficiences, yet his standing power and his ability to get a long wave after a fly ball helps to overcome his weaknesses.

Snodgrass is a puzzle to me. This is a puzzle. Why does Stallings, one of the smartest managers in the game, grab so many mediocre outfielders? Snodgrass once promised to become a great outfielder. He never developed and never would have been one, but, in his hot-head, he looked that way, but Mc-Graw, wanting to use this raucy and promising looking fellow every day, transformed him into an outfielder.

SNODGRASS LACKS AGGRESSION.

We all kept hoping that he would become a great outfielder. But he never has. He lacks initiative, lacks aggressiveness, and is not perfect in a purely mechanical way. Indeed, I think he has gone back to some degree—just how much is hard to decide—in the last few years. Fellow, who is always out at any time—especially dangerous when his team is in a close and fight place. Oddly enough, he looks almost as well as a utility fielder against the uncertain White Sox staff.

When we come to the Red Sox, undoubtedly Duffy Lewis is the best all-round fielder of the three pitchers, but as straight batting is concerned, as a rival of the waiting Speaker, and against the uncertain White Sox staff.

HARDEN TAKES TROPHY.

"Wahl Bill" reached into the air and clutched a foul from the silent town Wilson's bat. Then he sur-rendered his game to Ed Reulbach. It was a rare touch of sentiment for "Wahl Bill." He seemed somewhat abashed by his action as he trotted stoutly across the field toward the club house, thoughtfully fondling the lodge in the right side of his coat, from to the left side and back again.

Many of the fans at the baseball will probably be found resting in the back room in the parlor of "Wahl Bills" farmhouse out in Indiana, and on state occasions "Wahl Bill" will delightedly exhibit this trophy rare to persons of sufficient importance to justify the honor, and relate its history.

"Wahl, now, you see," he'll say-and then he will tell the story; how that tobacco-stained spheroid was in play on that memorable day back there in the big city when clouds of dust were knocked out of ancient records, and the people rushed out on the field to shake ball players by the hand, and when Harry M. Stevens, in a hand-boiled hat, was moved to Shakespear-ean oration from the press stand.

"The dog is called the feast of Crispian," recited Harry.

"He that outlives this day, and comes safe home,

Will stand a tiptoe when this day is named,

And rouse him at the name of Crispian.

He that shall live this day and see old age,

Will rarely on the vigil feast his neighbors,

And say, 'Tomorrow is Saint Crispian.'

Then will he strip his sleeve and show the scars,

And say, 'These wounds I had on Crispian's day.'"

Meaning that it was a great day, which it was.

ALL SEEK COVETED BALL.

When its was all over John J. McGraw, who drove the Giants through to their record, went out to the home plate to get that very baseball which "Wahl Bill" was hanging away in his hip pocket, so in lieu of that Hank O'Day handed McGraw the other balls that had been used over in the game.

As he did so the corrugated features of Hank relaxed slightly in a congratulatory smile. Old enemies these—the stormy petrel of the big league, and the gruffest gatherlutter of them all—but even Hank seemed to feel that the occasion justified felicitations.

The passing of the ancient Providence Grays had left Hank the watch. Arthur Irwin, who participated in all of the twenty consecutive victories of the Grays, was the first to congratulate Hank. He watched the tying of the old record with mingled feelings, but after it had been equaled he was rooting for the Giants to add another to it.

OTHER VETERANS AT GAME.

Some other baseball celebrities were outfielder, John Montgomery Ward, Dasher Troy and Joe Hornung were pastimers of the old regime who watched the games. All of them afterward expressed their admiration for the new champions.

Sam Crane, still another diamond veteran of the time of the Grays, sat in the baseball reporters' aisles in the press box.

"Busted, by gosh!" was all Sam said.

Columbus, O., Sept. 25.—Short-price favorites won the two trotting races on the Grand Circuit card at the Driving Park.

Early Don, another top-heavy favorite, won the 2:15 trot in straight heats. Hal Connor annexed the first division of the 2:18 pace, while the second division went to Queen Hal.

"Tie game.

By DAMON RUNYON.

New York, Sept. 28.—Jawn McGraw and his noble band of Giants own a world's championship, and are not going to dispute their title, for any old ball club which can go out and win twenty-one straight games is entitled to own at least a little place like Manhattan.

Meanwhile McGraw and his followers are not going to neem nothing ball as it should be played in an effort to pile up a record which future generations will talk about as they talk about the stave in the corner grocery store on Saturday nights.

"Wall Bill" Barden, the methodical, phenomenal, easy-going Hoosier backstop of the Giants, who made the final put-out in the second game of the double-header with the St. Louis Cardinals up at the Polo Grounds.

Like the play which made comic-like the twenty-first consecutive victory for the Giants, establishing a new record for major league baseball They beat the Cards 6 to 2 in that game, which was the first game of the double-header in a score of 1 to 0, triumph equalling the record of twenty-one straight set by the Providence Grays thirty-two years ago.

Morrill to Help Harvard Team

There is to be a re-arrangement in Harvard's track coaching system for the coming year. While Coach Mike Murphy and Dr. Dunton is continuing in charge of the development of the sprinters and distance runners, to assist in putting the Crimson back in the spotlight, "Doc" Morrill, former Brandeis and Purdue track coach, has been secured.

Morrill will probably share with Ellery H. Clark the burden of developing capable field event performers. Harry Worcester Smith, the chairman of the board of directors, has taken a prominent part in the coaching conference have been made by Manager Ted Cook, and much enthusiasm among the undergraduates and the athletic association did its part by generously furnishing shots and hammers to any athlete who requested them for private practice.

Coach Clark has found his duties as assistant graduate treasurer of Harvard Union and treasurer of the Harvard Union too exacting on his time and he gladly welcomes Morrill's arrival to share his burdens.

Green Line Weak Claim Coaches

Hanover, N. H., Sept. 26.—The Dartmouth football squad has begun preparations for the game with Boston College Saturday.

The drill consisted of dummy tackling, punting and forward passing, followed by a long signal drill.

Coach Spaulding of New Hampshire State was satisfactory, notwithstanding the muddy field, it is evident that the line is far from satisfactory to Coach Cavanaugh. The men are still charging high and the blocking is far above criticism.

The line men seem to lack knowledge of fundamentals, and are not yet working as a unit.

ASSIGN BOSTON SCHOOL COACHES

The following teacher coaches have been assigned to Boston High Schools by vote of the School Committee: Andrew Peppard, Cloyd Oviatt, Brighton High, James H. Carroll; Charlestown High, Robert G. Fisher; Dorchester High, Arthur W. Ross; English High, Daniel V. O'Flaherty; High School of Commerce, Edward P. Shattuck; Hyde Park High, William M. Regan; Jamaica Plain High, Joseph R. B. Dunn; West Roxbury High, Thaddeus J. Keefe.

Henry G. Hudson and Thomas A. Scanlon, as coaches, were assigned to East Boston and South Boston High schools, respectively.

LOTS OF RECRUITS FOR TUFTS '17 NINE

Tufts Fall baseball practice starts tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock on account of the entire infield of last Spring championship team, Coach Jack Slattery has hard to get a line on the new material as early as possible.

Among the new men who are thought to be of varsity calibre are: Bowler, last year's Goddard High star; Morgan, another battery aspirant, from Girls' High; Howard Deane, pitcher, from New Haven; Finnigan, an outfielder from South Boston High, and Keefe, Dean's crack catcher.

PENN LOSES GIANT GUARD

Philadelphia, Sept. 27.—Charlie Benning, giant guard of the University of Pennsylvania eleven, was operated on for appendicitis and may be lost to the team for the balance of the season. Benning, whose home is in Buffalo, N. Y., Coach Folwell's most promising lineman.

BRAVES NOTES

TYLER uncovered one of his rare games and was for George Tyler, a record one of that species it's well worth seeing. He forced the Reds to fan 12 times and the entire outfit but seven blows, and, on the whole, worked well right from the start.

WHILE loading the cuss here let's say something good about the somewhat-venerable Mike Donlin. Old Ed also worked a nice game. The six hits he allowed were well scattered and two of them were scratches. Jack Edward's triple was a valiant effort, but the long run didn't fire the veteran for long.

CALLAHAN plans to send a team up and down and to make the trip himself in order to study his home rivals. It's a wise move and his help. The athletes who figure in next morning's game can go to bed early and after the game, or else head direct for Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where another exhibition contest is scheduled for Thursday.

THE two pirates, Joe Tinnin and Percy Hughes, are due to meet together tomorrow and discuss the coming World's Series. It will be definitely settled whether or not the Red Sox will use Braves Field in the event of the Braves not landing.

Miss Brandon Is in Third Round

Among the surprises in the early rounds in the women's open tennis tournament at Longwood was Miss Gwendolin Brandon's victory over Miss Marion Fenno. Miss Brandon, a newcomer to Longwood tennis, played a superb game and won, 8—1, 4—2, 6—1.

Miss Evelyn Sears and Mrs. Barger-Wallach moved into the third brackets without permitting their opponents to win a single game. Other noted racquet-wielders coming through are Miss Wisconsin Sears, Miss Edith Rotch, Miss Alice Cunningham, Miss Ina Kissell, Mrs. A. A. Sprague and Miss Florence Hallin.

There will be play in both ingles and doubles today. The winner of the singles tournament is to meet Miss Molla Bjurstedt, national champion, and last year's Longwood winner.

MEREDITH IN POOR SHAPE FOR TRIP

New York, Sept. 26.—"Ted" Meredith, America's peerless track athlete, on the eve of his departure for Sweden, reported in anything but the best of condition at the office of the Amateur Athletic Union to make final arrangements for the trip.

Meredith, accompanied by Joe Loomis and Andy Ward of the Chicago A. A., Rolf Simpson of the University of Missouri and Fred Murray of Leland Stanford, sails on Thursday, on the Oscar II., and counts on the long sea voyage to put him in shape.

He is suffering from boils, and has lost weight.

WILD BILL BRINGING 24.

The Yankees a e due in Boston tonight for their final series with the Red Sox, which starts tomorrow at Fenway Park. Manager Donovan is to chaperone a party of twenty-four warriors. Walters and Alexander are the pitching stars. Brown, Boehler, Cullop, Mogridge, Love, Buckels and Cantwell are the pitchers.

DODGERS LOSING PUNCH

Phillies Will Take Lead in National League If They Win and Brooklyn Loses Today.

Gaining ground at every step the Phillies are overhauling the Dodgers in the race for the National League pennant.

Since Saturday Pat Moran's National League champions have cut down the Dodgers' lead from 2½ games to a game. And the Quaker lads can go into the lead if they win today's game while the Dodgers lose again to the Cubs. The Brooklyn club appears to have lost its punch, and will have to fight hard to retain its present advantage.

A week ago it looked as if the Dodgers had the hunting all ready to attach to the flag pole in Ebbet's Field. Today they are fighting with their backs to the wall to ward off the Phillies, who, with Alexander, Rixey and Demaree pitching the ball that chalks up games in the win column, are breezing along like a cyclone.

The Dodgers have two more games to play with the Cubs and then will begin the real crucial series of the season, when they open with the Phillies beginning Thursday. The result of these games may decide the pennant.

The Phillies have one more game with the Cubs, then they rest up a day before tackling the Dodgers. After that they play the Braves six games. Should they take a majority of games from the Dodgers they have a better chance to land.

The Dodgers will have to play four games with the Giants, and McGraw's men are now playing the best ball in the league. They have established a new record of straight wins—twenty-one games—surpassing the Providence record of twenty, which had stood for thirty-two years.

And many "fans" in New York are sorry that the Giants are not closer to the Dodgers. They have they surely would come through.

$1.00 GIANT PARLAY WOULD RETURN $2,097,151

New York, Sept. 25.—A one dollar parlay on the Giants to win twenty-one straight games would give the winner odds of $2,097,151 to one.

In other words, if a bettor put up one dollar at even money on the game played September 7, and he continued to follow the fortunes of the Giants in each game, betting the entire amount each day, he would now have a bankroll of $2,097,151, provided, of course, that he would have placed that bet each day.

HUGHES ALMOST READY.

Pitcher Tom Hughes of the Braves, who has been out for the past three weeks with a broken hand, expects to be in uniform today. Hughes is hopeful he will be able to get busy in the series in New York and Philadelphia.

Sox Need 4 Victories Pennant Then Sure

Four more victories and the Red Sox will have clinched the American League pennant, even if the White Sox win all of their remaining games. The Tygers still have a mathematical chance to grab the bunting in the Johnson circuit, but that is about all. Consequently the clan of Carrigan is not worrying about them.

The Red Sox have seven more games to play, four with the Yankees and three with the Athletics. The White Sox have four games to play with Cleveland.

Yesterday they came perilously close to disposing of one of their rivals, the Tygers. However, the Detroit club is not yet mathematically out of the hunt for an opportunity is yet offered Jennings and his bunch to land. The chance is so slight, however, that none will harp on it. With three games to play as against seven for the Red Sox, one can't find much to hang a Tyger success on.

To lose the pennant and the Red Sox would have to lose all their remaining games while the Tygers were winning those three they have yet to play. Chicago with four games left must win all and the Red Sox lose five of their games to lose the premier position.

The Phillies lived up to predictions and trounced the Reds in the single game they played yesterday, while the Braves were battling scores with Ebbets by landing one of the two games played. It appears very much as though Tinker would make good his threat to knock the Robins right out of the first place. And while these teams were battling, some hundreds of miles away the Braves were holding themselves down to the third rung, grabbing both ends of a twin bill with the Pirates. Thus they gained a game on the Robins and half a game on Cincinnati.

The Braves, like the White Sox and Tygers, have a mathematical chance to land the pennant. It, however, calls for them to land twleve of the fourteen games they have yet to play, while the Robins and Phillies are splitting even or thereabout. The Robins have but nine left and the Phillies seven. Should they land four of those nine games and the Braves win twelve that is certain to be theirs, it is a nice race. Philadelphia must win and lose five to land back of the Braves.

One hardly dares hazard an opi ion as to just what Stallings' bunch will do. He is sure that if they play the class of ball they showed against the Pirates today nothing can stop them. However, in view of the in and out performances since Labor Day nothing is certain as to the future.

Yesterday's happenings in both leagues results in the following standing of the three leaders in each league today:

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

	To play.	W.	L.	P.C.
Boston	7	90	57	.612
Red Sox	7	87	60	.592
White Sox	4	86	64	.573
Tygers	3	85	66	.563
		NATIONAL LEAGUE.
	To play.	W.	L.	P.C.
Robins	9	88	57	.607
Phillies	10	86	57	.601
Braves	12	81	58	.589

CLOSE IN NATIONAL.

Thus it can be seen that in the American League the Red Sox lead Chicago by two and a half games and Detroit by four. The Robins' lead over Philadelphia has been cut to one full game and to four games over the Braves, and the Phillies' lead over Boston is three games. Philadelphia has passed the .600 per cent. mark

McCOURT OFF IN FRONT.

O'Leary on with Moran Top Arena Boxing Bill

By RINGSIDE.

Johnny O'Leary, the Seattle, Wash., lightweight, who is now holding forth at Buffalo, N. Y., engaged in business there with Darby Kelly, his manager, as his partner, goes on with Vic Moran of New Orleans, claimant of the Southland 135-pound crown, in the main engagement on tonight's fistic card at the Arena.

O'Leary did not experience the slightest bit of trouble making the lightweight limit in his starts with Ever Hammer and Johnny Dundee here this Summer. Moran, too, has always been rated a legitimate 135-pounder, though, truth to tell, he was high in flesh when he started training for tonight's melee some ten days ago and may find it a hard matter to come in at the class limit. The weight is 135 at 3 o'clock.

Joe McCarthy, Moran's manager, claims that the Southerner has left all his extra embonpoint in the training camp and will come in as an out-and-out lightweight. Maybe so and maybe so.

WELL MATCHED PAIR.

Still, it looks as if the two bouters will be right together, so far as the weight question is concerned, and old Pop Dope has got to experience a terrible jar for their bout not to be a pierce with action and make a big bit with the fans.

O'Leary has been installed the betting favorite. While he has been idle since collapsing in the Arena ring in his sizzling encounter with Johnny Dundee, it is Manager Kelly's claim that the Seattle Flash is back in his very best form and is going to land a positive winner.

Moran delivered big in his lone start in Boston. He drew Frankie Mack, the Beachmont welterweight as a foe, and went to a dead heat with that veteran ringster, although outweighed fully fifteen pounds. There's little difference in the boxing skill of the two boys. O'Leary stayed up with Hammer, while Moran was right there with Mack. Against Dundee, O'Leary was naturally outstepped.

BOUT PROMISES WELL.

The boxing fans are showing big interest in the battle, and on paper it looms up as a whale of an attraction. It is to go the customary twelve rounds, with Larry Conley, supposedly, the third man in the ring.

The semi-final, also programmed to go twelve rounds, brings together Pete Hartley of Leo P. Flynn's stable, a former New Haven, Ct., gloveman, now labeled from New York, and Billy Meyers, who is operating in the McCarthy string with Vic Moran.

Meyers, too, is a New York booking, though he has made his home in South Boston of late months, and claims he is here for a long time to come.

Hartley and Meyers had it out in cyclonic fashion when they clashed at the Arena several weeks ago. Meyers went on as a substitute for Mel Coggan of Brooklyn, who failed to come on to fill his engagement, and battled equally as boisterously as Hartley.

A draw verdict was rendered at the close, although the talent made Hartley an almost prohibitive favorite in the betting.

ARMORY A. A. PROGRAM.

Johnny O'Leary of Seattle, Wash., vs. Vic Moran of New Orleans, twelve rounds.

Pete Hartley of New York vs. Billy Meyers of New York, twelve rounds.

Joe Camp of the North End vs. Johnny Morris of Montreal, six rounds.

Nat Segal of Revere vs. "Flash" Rogers of New Bedford, six rounds.

ONLY A RAW EGG FOR BREAKFAST

Boston Man Was in a Serious State of Health Prior to Taking Plant Juice.

Thousands of people in Boston are needlessly suffering from disorders of the blood, stomach, liver and kidneys. Relief is at hand and within the reach of everyone. Many have found quick deliverance from their suffering through the use of Plant Juice, the new herbal stomach remedy, which is composed of a combination of Nature's remedies—herbs, roots, barks and berries, which are essential to health. This is why it regenerates the blood supply, overcomes rheumatism, eliminates catarrh and puts the stomach in condition to digest the food properly.

That this is proven conclusively it is only necessary to listen to the signed statements of well-known local people, statements made daily, telling of the great benefit they have derived from Plant Juice, as, for instance, the case of Mr. Joseph McLoughlin, who lives at No. 115 A street and is by occupation a lead worker. Mr. McLoughlin has many friends and acquaintances in this city. He said:

"I have suffered with stomach trouble for two years, which took the form of indigestion and dyspepsia. I could not eat any solid food without suffering the greatest distress; could not even eat any breakfast except a raw egg; was all bloated, and tired all the time; in fact, was so weak that I could hardly get around to do my work. I was very much discouraged, as I thought I would never get any better, until I saw your ad in the paper of a case which exactly fitted mine, so I decided to try it, and am pleased to state that after taking two bottles I feel like a new man; can eat anything I want to without distress, sleep well, and have gained in weight. Plant Juice has cured me and I am glad to recommend it to others."

Plant Juice acts like magic in stomach trouble, gas, fermentation, heavy, distressed feeling after meals and on retiring. It attacks and destroys all poisons in the blood, corrects diseased conditions of the liver and kidneys and restores them to normal condition. It banishes rheumatism from the blood.

The Plant Juice Man is at The Drug Department of the Houghton & Dutton Store, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

HUNTINGTON BOYS IN FIRST DRILL

Huntington School football candidates were given their first practice at the old Walpole street grounds, under charge of Coach Williams. But one veterans is on the squad. He is Jack Smith, a halfback. Captain Bill Hagan has left and entered Stone School, which will necessitate another election. One of the strong additions to the squad is L. Johnson, who played on the Waltham the last year.

Young Britt to Meet Shubert

Young Britt and Al Shubert, the two New Bedford featherweights, are to meet in the main event on next Tuesday's card at the Arena, according to Ray Cass, the former's manager.

Cass was an AMERICAN caller today. He stated that the match while on, so far as the club was concerned, would not be clinched until weight forfeits went up tonight with Mish Murray, manager of the Armory A. A.

Cass claims that 120 pounds at 5 p. m. is the weight notch agreed upon and that each side is to post $250 guaranteeing the figure will be made.

JOHNNY GRIFFITHS BESTED BY WELLING

Akron, O., Sept. 26.—Joe Welling, the Chicago welterweight, outpointed Johnny Griffiths here after twelve rounds of fast fighting. Welling forced the Akron boxer to hold on to save himself from a knockout.

JABS AND JOLTS.

It is Alex MacLean's claim that Harry Greb, the Boston lightweight, is not serious in his feud with Freddie Yelle, the attempted Trenton 135-pounder, who recently slapped himself under the management of Patsy Kelly impresario.

YELLE relieved Matty Baldwin of his crown last Winter, polishing off the former New England champion some six months before Cirtell outpointed him in their guess at the Commercial A. C. Hence Manager Kelly is confident his charge has every right to claim the lightweight championship of this section.

A WEEK ago MacLean posted $200 with the sporting editor of the AMERICAN in support of a challenge to Carbon. He gave the Carbon contingent a week in which to be heard from and intimated taking down his forfeit tonight if it is not covered during the day.

YELLE is ticketed to meet Mike Cowley at a Commercial A. C. Friday night, while MacLean has George Akers, another member of the string, booked to box at Portland, Me., Saturday night.

AL McMURRAY writes the AMERICAN from Brooklyn stating that nothing will suit him better than to match Willie Jones or Larry Hansen, his two lightweights, with Yelle, Carbon or any other 135-pounder in this section. McMurray has his two battlers booked to show in Philadelphia October 8.

LAST NIGHT IN THE RING.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 26.—George (Knockout) Brown of Chicago stopped Knockout Brennan, the Buffalo middleweight, in a fast and fiercely-contested bout.

New York, Sept. 26.—Tommy Geary and "Abe Attell" Goldstein, lightweights, furnished a real shindig at the Polo A. C. Geary winning the decision. Johnny Farrell outpointed Eddie Burke.

New York, Sept. 26.—Al McCoy, who says he licked out George Chip, and Jack Dillon in the third round at the Military A. C. Wednesday night, is to box Jack Bloom, the Greenwich Village boy, in four rounds; Jimmy Grey stepped George Rooney in the fourth round, and Tony Vaccaro and Dan McCormack drew, eight rounds.

Columbus, O., Sept. 26.—Battling Levinsky of New York scored an easy victory over Battling Bradley of Columbus in twelve rounds. Bradley was floored four times.

Philadelphia, Sept. 26.—Benny Leonard, the New York lightweight, shaded Johnny Tillman of St. Paul, Minn., in six fast rounds.

Tamaqua, Pa., Sept. 26.—Jack McCarron, the Allentown welterweight, won from Kid ... out decision of New York ... ten ...

Likens and Lovell Out Harvard Line Shifted

Another matinee, devoted almost entirely to absorbing the rock-bottom principles of football fundamentals, kept the Harvard varsity squad on its toes this afternoon. The poor showing of the regular forwards in last Saturday's game with Colby has filled the coaches with much concern, and all their spare time for the next few weeks will be used in impressing the players with the importance of team work.

Yesterday's practice, which lasted until 6 o'clock, was chock full of rudimentary football. Before the men were allowed to go into the Stadium Coach Leary gave them a half-hour blackboard talk in the locker building, emphasizing the errors made in the Colby game.

CAMER WITH REGULARS.

Two changes were made in the varsity when the squad was locked up in the Stadium. Phinney, a freshman regular last Fall, displaced Vance Likens at left end, while George Caner, intercollegiate tennis champion, was put into the lineup for the first time, replacing Dug Lovell at left tackle.

Caner has the build and the speed to make an ideal tackle and Coach Bob Fisher has given him a great deal of attention the past few days. Gardiner, who was second-string quarterback, was on a furlough, and Billy Murray piloted Team B, a position he will probably hold, even when the former returns. Murray is the heaviest quarterback on the squad, can match any of them for speed, is in possession of good football brains, and can drop-kick with anyone on the field.

Bulger Lowe is to Join B. C. Squad

Coach Brickley has started the Boston College squad on the last lap of its practice for the Dartmouth game Saturday. The gruelling was unusually heavy, the tackles in particular coming in for a lot of hard work.

Last Saturday's practice game with the Neponset Wanderers showed a tendency on the part of the linemen to play high and the drilling was directed towards remedying this evil.

Jack Sullivan, last year's crack tackle, is showing good form, and from all appearances, should hold tight against the Green.

Bulger Lowe, one of the State's best known athletes, registered at Boston College and is expected to don a suit today or tomorrow. Lowe has been an end man, but will probably be used at tackle. He is expected to be a great asset to the Maroon and Gold, as he originally starred at Exeter and last year was one of Lafayette's best warriors.

Among the other newcomers taken in hand by Bob Fowler for the preliminary gruelling were Shugrue, the St. John's Prep star; Austin, rated a good end man; McCarthy, three years varsity tackle for Boston College; Jack Whooley, of last year's team; McDonald and Crowley.

WILLIAMS IN SCRIMMAGE.

Williamstown, Sept. 26.— Coach Brooks gave the Williams squad its most strenuous workout of the year here, the varsity and scrubs competing in a spirited scrimmage for a solid hour. Twice in the first fifteen minutes the regulars carried the pigskin over for touchdowns. The scrubs then braced and tallied themselves later on as the result of an intercepted forward pass.

O'Brien went to halfback on the varsity and made a strong showing behind the line.

TIGER SQUAD BUSY.

Lake Minnewaska, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Final preparation for the opening game with Holy Cross began at the Tiger camp at Lake Minnewaska. As a result of the failure of several formations to work out as successfully as Coach Rush hoped, most of the remaining time before the contest Saturday will be devoted to perfecting it.

The Tiger squad plans to leave for Worcester early Thursday morning and will stop off at Albany for several hours of practice.

LARGE CORNELL SQUAD.

Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Fifty-eight men, the largest opening day football squad in years, reported to the Cornell coaches at the Schoellkopf club-house for their initial workout. All the available varsity men but Tilley were out, and a large number of substitutes from last year, as well as recruits from the freshman team.

The men were divided into squads and put through the usual preliminary work.

NEW STARS AT FORDHAM.

New York, Sept. 26.—With the final week of the pre-season training at hand, the Fordham football squad settled down to some hard work before the opening game with Lafayette on Saturday at Easton.

Two likely newcomers reported in Branzy, a tackle who won his letter at Syracuse last season, and Connolly, another Syracuse player, who played end on the freshman team.

HARD DRILL FOR ARMY.

West Point, N. Y., Sept. 26.—More hard work features the gridiron drill of the Army men. Two stiff scrimmage sessions were gone through. The varsity tallied once when Gran, a substitute back, smashed through the scrubs for the score.

Cole was back at right end, where Shrader, the plebe, has been seen much of late. Cole is kicking well, too.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION.

At Milwaukee: Minneapolis 9, Milwaukee 4. At Kansas City: 3d, Paul 4, Kansas City 1. No other games scheduled.

2 Touchdowns for Yale Colts

New Haven, Ct., Sept. 26.—Both the varsity and second eleven were at the top of their scoring power, in opening the fourth week of Yale football practice.

Waite and Nevitt, who were promoted to the varsity backfield as halfbacks, and Fullback Emil Jacques scored touchdowns, while Gaillard and Nichols went over for the scrubs.

Nichols seized the ball on a fumble and ran 90 yards for his score, but Gaillard rammed his way through the varsity rush line for a clean-cut touchdown.

Because of a sore foot Henry Logee did not play. Moseley and Comerford, as ends; Carter, at right guard, were given varsity tryouts for the first time.

THEY'RE OFF AT MEDFORD

A three-days harness meet opens at Combination Park, Medford, this afternoon. Some of the best trotters and pacers in New England are entered in the three events making up the card. The racing will be under the direction of Mike Cronin.

THE STOVE.

I remember, I remember
The house when I was young.
A lot or wopa infest it now
And speak a foreign tongue.
Ah, well do I remember when,
As wintry days arrove,
My father—may he rest in peace—
Put up the front room stove.

He always wound the eight-day clock
And he, and only he,
Could take the time-piece from the wall
And twist the old brass key.
The clock was always on the bum
But when the I'all arrove
My father—may he rest in peace—
Put up the front room stove.

It was the most eventful day
Of all my glad young years.
We watched him puttering away
With hope and doubts and fears.
It was a solemn function when,
As wintry days arrived,
My father—may he rest in peace—
Put up the front room stove.

"SIMEON GOLD!" So it was Simeon Gold in whose meshes Madeline Grey was involved. Then, indeed, unless she was fearless as well as innocent, her need of help was dire!

Simeon Gold was editor as well as part owner of "The Vampire," a weekly which was maliciously well named. It dealt in scandal and fed on the carrion of dead reputations.

On the outskirts of journalism there lie a few sinister sheets which deal with the unquiet ghosts skulking in the graveyards of human desire. Of these "The Vampire" possessed and deserved the greatest need of evil notoriety.

The business of "The Vampire" was twofold—to fatten oil blackmail and to build up a rich circulation among the morbid group of those who enjoy knowing the worst of human nature.

It pandered deliberately to two great human frailties: Curiosity, the appetite of some to know what others long to conceal, and Secretiveness, juggler of the cynical old fallacy, "anything is all right as long as you don't get found out!"

A Heartless Traffic

The business of scandal-mongering is as old as the world. The serpent of Eden stands for morbid desire to know the forbidden, and Jacob's sons told evil tales of their brother.

Simeon Gold sold polluted news in his tainted sheet—and sold immunity from being pilloried there to those who feared publicity more than paying his extortionate price—the price of uneasy and guilty silence.

Madeline Grey was only one of many pathetic women who grovelled in fear at God's threat to drag her clanking skeleton from its cupboard and flaunt the uncovered bones before a grinning, jeering world.

But for her there threatened more than the pillory of public scorn—the love and trust of an eager, unfled boy were at stake. And she was afraid to put her whole world—a man's faith—to so grim a test as she must endure, unless Simeon Gold's power were broken.

The man could not be won to pity or an isolated flare of decency. He must be fought or terrified into yielding up the letters.

There was another method of dealing with Gold, but I did not think of it then. It needed wise old Granny and clever Jimmy Barton to persuade me of the only way to save Madeline Grey.

His Offer to Her

"How often have you seen Simeon Gold?" I asked.

"Once—this morning. I had a letter from him telling me that unless I wished to see my letters to Charles Duane in cold type, I had better come in and talk over a friendly arrangement to suppress them. I was frightened, of course, but I thought I had better act at once. The letter insinuated that now, while Mr. Gray was out of town, was the psychological moment for action.

"So I hurried right down there. Oh! Miss Fairfax, I know exactly how a fly must feel when it first comes aware of the fact that it's hopelessly enmeshed in the spider's web. Gold's office is the most gorgeous place I ever saw—are all newspaper offices like that?" she concluded naively.

"Bless you, no. Newspaper offices are made for use, not show, Mrs. Grey. Besides which, a scandal weekly" like the Vampire isn't deserving of the title newspaper. It deals with all the news that is unfit for print. Newspapers consign it to the magazine world, and magazines decline to have it classified with them, so it is battered around from shuttlecock to shuttlecock and is refused a resting place. This is exactly the first time I have ever come into contact with it."

Mrs. Grey's sense of humor had struggled up through her fears for the moment, but it could not remain on the surface, and her terror took possession of her again.

"Oh, Miss Fairfax, I begged and begged for those letters. I assured him that they couldn't interest anybody but me. He said they interested him very much. And finally he sneered at me in a tone that made me realize he understood some of Wilbur's jealousy. 'My dear Mrs. Grey, your husband will return day after tomorrow. I am sure he will pay my price rather than have the letters appear in the Vampire.'

"Then I began pleading all over again. I was so frightened that I didn't realize he was the sort of brute to enjoy the sense of power my pleading gave him. Finally I told him that I couldn't buy the letters from him and that I couldn't bear to have him go to Wilbur.

An Infamous Proposal

"Oh, Miss Fairfax, I can't tell you the expression that came over his face then. He laughed and leaned forward and said in the most insinuating tone I have ever heard, 'There are so many ways a pretty young woman can get money. Even I would be willing'—

"I didn't let him go on. I am old enough to understand what a man like that means when he seizes my wrist and leers such words to me. I pushed him away somehow and jumped to my feet. I had a heavy veil thrown back over my hat, for you may be sure I was not very anxious to have anyone discover me going into Simeon Gold's office. I pulled it down in a great hurry when he said I was pretty.

"There didn't seem any particular object in staying, and so, although I had accomplished nothing, I hurried away. I don't know what I intended to do. I had not thought of you then. Just as I was leaving he called after me, 'Within two days, dear lady, come to my house with the money or—be prepared to pay another price. You may name it.'

I stared at the desperate creature before me with a queer tightening at my heart strings. Her tragedy was so unnecessary—and that was what made it so hard to endure. Based on nothing, the outgrowth of no shameful thing, it yet had assumed proportions where it threatened to bedevil all of her life.

"You do understand some of my horror. Oh! if you had seen the way he shrugged his shoulders when he gave me his ultimatum you'd be even sorrier for me than I can see you are now. I staggered home somehow and sobbed for an hour before I thought of you. It just flashed across my mind like an inspiration that you had helped other women in trouble and that you wouldn't refuse to help me."

"I will help you, Mrs. Grey. I don't see how just this minute, but I am sure there is a way. Your letters to Charles Duane shall not be published in 'The Vampire,' and your husband shall not know of them—until you are ready to tell him. I am going to help you—but there is a price I ask. Do you must tell your husband the truth. Will you promise that?"

"Oh! yes. I couldn't go on living on the edge of the volcano. Some day when I am calm again I'll tell Wilbur all about the man I thought I loved ten years before I met him. But I needn't show him the letters—surely you won't ask that?"

"No, I won't ask that," I said, as if those letters were already in our possession.

But a second later I smiled to myself. I had promised to get the letters and Madeline Grey had promised to tell her husband the truth. Her promise was contingent on mine. How could either one of us keep our word?

"Mothers Will Thank Mr. Ince for Lesson of Peace in 'Civilization'"

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

I have seen Mr. Ince's stupendous cinema production, "Civilization," and all that I can say of it is that it is wonderful, and again, wonderful.

There is no use in my trying to describe it. The task were impossible. It will not be described. It cannot be described. To get anything like a fair idea of it one must SEE it.

And even then one cannot take it all in. Its vastness, its spectacular splendor, its overpowering, thrilling, bewildering display of stage effect and idea fairly stun one, and one goes away like one in the grip of a wonderful dream.

AIM OF FILM IS NOBLE.

I am not going to attempt to tell the story that "Civilization" illustrates. That has already been finely done in the columns of this newspaper. All that I am going to do is to say this: That the mission of the great picture play is the very noblest conceivable, and that in its arrest, noble purpose there is not a single flaw.

PEACE! How beautiful it is! How we all love it! How the purest and noblest of the earth admire it and work for it!

At this particular time how the whole world, including even the battling legions of the fighters themselves, are praying, praying for it!

God of Heaven, Thou alone knowest how we LOVE peace, and how we are LONGING for it. Our hearts are bleeding, our souls are in agony. It seems as though the bare thought of the monstrous, awful business that is going on across the seas would kill us!

Peace, beautiful Peace! God bless you, Mr. Ince, for the powerful, the unanswerable, argument you are putting up to us in favor of Peace, and against the brutal business of War.

The mothers of men, the world over, will rise up and call you blessed for having made your great picture, and well they may, for the spirit of the picture is as beautiful as the picture itself.

But! Confound that "but." Why does it push itself in upon us? Why does it not attend to its own business, if it has any, and leave us to the full and uninterrupted enjoyment of our picture?

In the very forefront of the picture stands, in shining armor, the "King of Wredpryd," mad with the "lust of conquest," and behind him ready to aid the king in his infamous designs, is the "most wonderful fighting machine in the world."

The tocsin sounds, and this mad army, starts out to enslave all Europe, to make the peoples of all nations bow down to his wicked will.

Peace? Of course it is beautiful, but should we be willing to purchase it at the price of liberty, and be willing, for the sake of it, to become slaves?

To cry for peace so long as the world's manhood and freedom are imperilled were a monstrous crime.

The man who is "too proud to fight" when the alternative is between fighting and the craven submission to tyranny and wrong is next door to nobody.

Of all the traitors to humanity that the world ever saw the worst is the man who strives to maintain "peace at any price," even at the price of individual and national self-respect and freedom.

"GOD IS LOVE, NOT SPRING."

To be sure, Truth and Right have God on their side; but God is noted for his long suffering and "watchful waiting," and if we mortals did not now and then do a little fighting on our own hook for the good cause, there is no telling what would become of us.

There was a time when civilization, such as it was, was confined to a few city-states like Thebes, Palmyra, Athens, Rome, Jerusalem, cases of light, in the midst of the world of absolute barbarism. And if those centres of nascent civilization had been of the "peace at any price" persuasion, the world would never have advanced a step. Injustice and brutality, backed by physical force, and ruining much over the world, must be met by physical force. The monster is not prepared to accept the beatitudes, or to be pacified and made decent by having them read to it.

Now Comes the Small Muff and the Circular Cape

These smart models of furs for the coming Winter are republished on this page by special arrangement with Good Housekeeping, the nation's greatest home magazine.

From Good Housekeeping for September

Furs, even without their usual Summer hibernation, came out with all sorts of new ideas about fur physiology. The muff, above, of moleskin and ermine, has a fringe of ermine tails across its apron, and was so generous with itself little seemed left to make a collar, so the moleskin neckpiece has to be very close to make ends meet. The brown velvet hat has a jet dragon to guard the crown.

Capes made tentative little nibbles at the mode this Winter, and fashion encouraged them with bits of favor until she trapped them as neatly as the hunter trapped the animal to make this Kolinsky cape. So now fashion makes the most of her catch, and capes will be admitted this Winter in all the best circles. This very handsome Kolinsky cape at the right is an especially good circle which falls almost to the elbows.

Broad-minded indeed in its attitude toward fashion is the stole muff, but it isn't by itself in that; there will be many stoles quite as generous to keep it company. This one is of ermine, stopped from going to even greater lengths by a row of ermine tails on each end. The muff is of the new oval "cantaloupe" type, and, in common with other new arrivals, it is trimmed on the lower side with ermine tails.

In Our Very Wonderful World

The danger of trains being blown off the rails, not uncommon on light, narrow-gauge railways, has been virtually eliminated on a stretch of thirty-six miles along the Atlantic coast of Ireland, forming part of the West Clare Railway. Probably there is no other line in the British Isles exposed to such violent gales, and during a few years prior to 1909 as many as five "blow-offs" occurred, in which carriages were completely smashed, though there was fortunately no loss of life. In that year an inventor devised for the railway a pressure-tube anemometer, with electrical apparatus for giving two warnings by ringing a bell in the station-master's house at Quilty; the first when the velocity of the wind reached sixty-five miles an hour, and the second when it reached eighty-five miles an hour. When the first warning is given, 2,400 pounds of movable ballast, kept for the purpose at every station, is placed on each vehicle of any train on the line at the first station it reaches. When the second signal is given, trains are stopped until the storm abates. Since the apparatus was installed, in December, 1908, there has been only one storm derailment, and this was due to deliberate disregard of the signals.

The British 12th Lancers have a musical custom to which penitential associations are attached. During twice the band plays every night in the year, after "Last Post" is sounded, the "Spanish chant," the "Vesper Hymn," and the Russian National Anthem. Tradition records that during the Peninsular War the regiment sacked a convent, and as a punishment the authorities imposed the playing of the "Spanish Chant." The "Vesper Hymn" is played in accordance with the conditions laid down by an officer's widow when she presented new instruments to the band over 100 years ago. The origin of playing the Russian National Anthem is not known.

NINTH HAS HIGH RECORD IN TESTS

By BERT FORD.

El Paso, Tex., Sept. 26.—The Ninth Regiment, commanded by Colonel Edward L. Logan of South Boston, scored the highest rating in the Federal tests held by army officers.

The Fifth Regiment, Colonel Willis W. Stover, stood second, and the Eighth Regiment, Colonel Frank A. Craven, was third. But less than two points separated the Ninth and the Eighth.

The Ninth attained a percentage of 93.8 in the so-called company combat tests, the most important from standpoint of efficiency in action. The Fifth earned 83 per cent, and the Eighth 81.6.

The combat tests included order combat patrols, formations use of cover, range, designation of target, distribution of fire, sight setting, fire control and discipline, continuity of fire, time, method and execution of reinforcing, time and conduct of charge, method of fixing bayonets, performance of duty, platoon commanders, guides and signalers.

The added test embraced, under one grouping, completeness, serviceability, cleanliness, adjustment and makeup, and under another grouping, first aid, signaling, bayonet exercise, battle orders and message writing.

In the company combat tests B Company of the Ninth, Captain William J. McCarthy of Boston scored 99.3, the highest in the brigade, and H Company, Captain John A. Dunn was second with 98.8.

The best company in the Eighth was F of Haverhill, Captain Charles H. Morse with 87.7, and D Company, Captain Thomas J. Cully of Lynn was second with 85.7. The best company in combat in the Fifth was L Company of Malden, Captain C. David Berg, with a score of 88, and E Company, Captain Robert M. Magee, was second with 85.8.

The company that scored the highest percentage in the brigade as an average for all tests was L Company of the Fifth from Malden, Captain C. David Berg, with 86, and F Company of the Eighth from Haverhill, Captain Charles H. Morse, with second highest in the brigade with 85.6, followed by H Company of the Ninth, Captain John A. Dunn, with 85.4, but two-tenths of a point behind the Haverhill company and six-tenths of a point behind L Company, the leader.

Other top-notch companies in the brigade percentages were D Company of the Fifth, Captain Charles H. Robbins of Plymouth, fourth, with 85; D Company of the Eighth, Captain Thomas J. Cohey of Lynn, in fifth place with 84.3; E Company of the Ninth, Boston, Captain J. J. O'Brien, sixth, with 83.7; and B Company of the Ninth, Captain William J. McCarthy, Boston, seventh with 83.2. The high standards set by all regiments was gratifying to commanding officers.

ARREST MADE IN 'DRESDEN DOLL' CASE

By International News Service.

New York, Sept. 6.—A woman police officer, Constance A. Kopp, dropped into town from Hackensack, N. J., and arrested the alleged principal in the alleged kidnaping of May Ward, "the Dresden doll."

She was armed with a warrant issued under the New Jersey "white slave" law on the application of the "doll's" husband, Freeman L. Bernstein, owner of motion picture theatres and resident of Leonia, N. J.

Accompanied by Detectives Cook and Campbell from police headquarters, she went to No. 128 Broadway and entered the office of Arthur G. Esch, attorney of the alleged "Dresden doll."

There she found Siegfried Wallace, for whom she was looking. He was taken to police headquarters and locked up pending extradition proceedings. He described himself as a theatrical manager. Wallace is said to be known also as Harry Siegel and to have an office in the Gaiety Theatre building.

The "Dresden doll" disappeared last Thursday after several days of exciting scenes in which her husband and the law officers from Hackensack contended with men from New York for the possession of Bernstein's wife.

JACKSON DORMITORY NAMES CHANGED

"The names of a college dormitory should carry with it a suggestion of education and culture." So said the powers that be at Jackson College, and the decree went forth whereby the historical names of Starr, Richardson and the Commons were abolished and letters of the Greek alphabet substituted. Henceforth Richardson House will be known as Alpha House, and Starr and the Commons as Beta and Gamma, respectively. However, the "bird-cage" will retain its old name and is still officially known as Mitchell Hall.

HUGE VOLUME OF TRADING ON N. Y. STOCK EXCHANGE

Following the huge volume of early trading involving a turnover of 1,500,000 shares in the first hour, prices on the New York stock Exchange, though slightly irregular at noon, showed an undercurrent of strength in the market.

The low prices made yesterday induced heavy buying by the public at the start and prices were higher. Steel opened at 118, a point above yesterday, while Amalgamated Copper leader, had a similar gain at 70¼.

In the second hour, heavy selling caused steel to sag to 112⅝, from which it quickly recovered to around 115. Other steel shares and copper companies in contrast showed strength.

At noon sales included Crucible Steel 5½, Republic Iron & Steel 3, Colorado Fuel 2¾, Great Northern Ore 1, Baldwin Locomotive 1½. Rumor was Steel Spring 2. Gains in coppers were: Anaconda ⅞, Inspiration ¾, Kennecott ⅝.

Some attention was paid to the railroad list, particularly Reading and Union Pacific which came within fractional distance of their high records. There was some talk in the street of increased dividends for Union Pacific. The railroad group altogether was firmer.

At noon railroad gains included Union Pacific ¾, Reading ½, Southern Pacific ¼, Ohio 1½. Other gains were: Atlantic Gulf & West Indies 1¼, Consolidated Gas 2¼, preferred 2¾, and Studebaker 1¼.

Losses included Utah Copper 1¼, Canadian Pacific ¾, Northern Pacific ½, New Haven ¾.

Close observers of the market declared there was no reason for yesterday's decline other than the feeling that after jumping for the past week the market was due for a slight setback. They say the rise was unprecedented and the fact that steel and copper companies are earning unprecedented profits should not be lost sight of.

The Boston market, after opening strong, became dull and most of the stocks were the most active. New Idria Quicksilver at noon had lost its early gain of 1 point, based on news that the directors had declared a dividend of 1¼.

Atlantic Gulf showed renewed activity and advanced ¾. Isle Royale and Osceola each announced a potash news each of their quarterly dividends had been increased $1. Boston & Maine also gained a point.

11-CENT MILK FOR PROVIDENCE OCT. 1

Providence, Sept. 26—Providence milk prices advance October 1. Some dealers will ask 10 cents a quart, while those who are already getting this price will charge 11 cents per quart and 6 cents a pint.

Bread prices on the 5-cent loaf will advance 1 or 2 cents, according to size, by the largest baking concern today.

Odds Lower Now Against Wilson

New York, Sept. 26—Wall street bettors who staking tokens at 2 to 1 on Hughes, Saturday, now offer no better than 8 to 5 on the Republican nominee. The odds were unsatisfactory to the believers in Mr. Wilson's election, and few bets were recorded.

L. J. Stokes, who on Saturday laid $5,000 against $2,500 that Mr. Hughes would win, could not effect the same amount of money at 8 to 5, but could find no taker.

HUGHES TALKS TO FARMERS IN OHIO

By International News Service.

Piqua, O., Sept. 26—Charles E. Hughes opened the second day of his three-day whirl through Ohio today with a fifteen-minute speech here to several thousand farmers and workingmen gathered to see and hear him. A train bearing the presidential candidate, Governor Willis and Colonel Myron T. Herrick stopped at the station.

The former justice's voice was much improved today, despite the strain of the long ride and the morning at Dayton. Two speeches at Toledo, short addresses at Bellevue and Fremont, a visit to Lindon at Mansfield, 287 W. Fourth st., Cincinnati, 3 p. m. today.

Hughes is expected to hammer hard on the Adamson eight-hour law, the anti-trust act and the Underwood tariff law, while other acts of the Wilson administration.

"The eight-hour bill does not deserve the name," he said. "It does not provide an eight-hour day. It gives only the hours of labor.

"There has been too much in the Wilson administration of comprehensive phrases in the statutes apparently intended to fool the people, and not enough men to get their votes, and another thing to another set of men to allay their fears.

"The recently enacted carpenters' shipping bill stands, but as a law and to the credit of the administration to the shipping industry of the country.

WOMEN "STRIKE" TO CUT CHICKEN PRICE

New York, Sept. 26—A strike of housewives, backed by the United Hebrew Trades, was begun by consumers of kosher chickens today in an attempt to extend the strike to all the women market patrons in the city.

Rosh Hashonah, New Year festival, is the statement that 500,000 housewives are on strike. She said the poultry dealers' profits are 100 per cent, which is an exorbitantly and that all women should refrain from buying poultry until prices reach their proper level.

WHITMAN REFUSES TO ACT ON STRIKE

New York, Sept. 26.—Governor Whitman let it be known today that he would not call a special session of the New York Legislature to deal with the threatened general strike here called for tomorrow. He said that he did not believe the present situation called for such drastic action.

No Health Board Should Be Allowed to Hide Paralysis Cases

IT is interesting to note that those wealthy Summer residents of the North Shore who live in parts of the country south of New York have arranged for a special train to transport them to their homes by a round-about route in order that they may not pass through paralysis-afflicted New York, and even for a moment come in contact with its people.

The wealthy residents of the North Shore are not born with any more brain power than the rest of them, but their wealth enables them to get the best expert advice. Therefore the extent of the danger of contagion coming through contact with perfectly healthy people who have been in the presence of infantile paralysis is clearly manifest by the fear that these wealthy residents display in their determination to avoid even passing through New York city.

Yet there are boards of health in Massachusetts foolish enough to keep secret the names of persons who are afflicted with infantile paralysis in this community for the very purpose, as they admit in their excuse for their action, of permitting the other members of the families of the afflicted persons to roam at large and to come in contact with people who have not been in the presence of the disease, and thus to communicate its germ to them.

It is a very serious question whether we ought not absolutely to quarantine by law those houses where infantile paralysis breaks out and confine the members of the family to the house until the danger is over. But until we realize the necessity of this drastic action, at least we ought to know where the danger is and exercise our own discretion in deciding whether or not we will permit OURSELVES to come in contact with the members of the family who may be carrying on their persons this dangerous germ and so communicating it to us, either giving us the disease itself or making us the carriers of the disease into our own families and into other families.

The Board of Health of Boston has decided, after reflection, to publish the names. The State Board of Health believes that the names should be published. Every board of health in this State ought to be made, if it will not of its own accord, to publish the names and addresses of the afflicted persons.

Why Accept Carranza as Mexican Government?

OUR government is dealing with Carranza as if he were the government of Mexico or as if he were or could be in control of any considerable part of Mexico.

We see from the dispatches that Villa is in control of the greater part of the north of Mexico; that Zapata is in control of the greater part of the south of Mexico, and that other bandits and other bandit bands are pillaging and plundering in other sections of Mexico. In fact, there seems to be no part of Mexico that Carranza does thoroughly control. Why, then, should the government of the United States recognize him as the government of Mexico or try by means of arms and loans to help make him the government of Mexico?

In the first place, the attempt is impossible, and, in the second place, it is unreasonable. There is no element of the Mexican people that has been more hostile to Americans than the Carranza crowd, and there is no element that has committed more outrageous acts in violation of civilized conventions.

All religious people, regardless of faith, all CIVILIZED people, are shocked and horrified by the outrages committed by the Carranza forces upon American women and Mexican women, and especially upon the nuns in the convents. All American citizens with a spark of patriotism are incensed at the needless and causeless attacks of the Carranza soldiery upon Pershing's forces, who were in Mexico mainly to aid Carranza and to punish Villa, his opponent.

The Carranza soldiers first shot down American soldiers when they were entering a town unarmed and only in search of food. They then murdered the reconnoitering party of our soldiers who had been sent out from the Pershing body in order to determine, if possible, the location of the Villa forces.

Villa himself has not been more hostile to Americans than Carranza. In fact, Villa was friendly to Americans until the United States government took the part of Carranza and endeavored to use the forces and resources of the United States to exalt Carranza over the other Mexican leaders.

The government of the United States has no business interfering in the politics of Mexico. The administration has no right to exercise its personal preferences and prejudices to meddle in internal Mexican affairs.

The duty of the United States government is to protect the lives and property of American citizens and safeguard the interests of the United States. It should do this with diplomacy if it can and with force if it cannot do it otherwise.

Mr. Wilson, in an article in the new Ladies' Home Journal, says that we can only act in Mexico IN A FRIENDLY WAY. There has never been a more feeble and fatuous statement of the Mexican situation than this one of Mr. Wilson in the new Ladies' Home Journal.

The medium for the expression of such a pitiful policy has been well selected; we can imagine only one more appropriate place for its exposition, and that would be in the "Old Ladies' Home Journal"—if there is such a publication.

According to Mr. Wilson, the hostile Mexican people may make war upon the United States as they see fit, but, nevertheless, our government must only approach them and reproach them in a friendly manner.

The Mexicans may murder American citizens, outrage American women, kill helpless American children, destroy American property, cross the frontier and attack American soldiers and civilians, lure an assisting American army into ambush and shoot our soldiers down in cold blood, and still, according to the administration, we Americans must regard the Mexicans as friends and their acts of murder, plunder, violation and outrage as evidences of good will.

Mr. Wilson's attitude and expressions in this connection are even more humiliating and discreditable than his recent statement that Americans are too proud to fight.

It would seem that Mr. Wilson is buying the campaign contribution of that noted pacifist, Mr. Henry Ford, at too large a sacrifice of his own honor and dignity and the honor and dignity of our country.

Respect for Others and From Others Is American Doctrine

THE AMERICAN has asked Mr. Hughes to say plainly whether he will resist British aggressions upon American rights and commerce as firmly as he would resist German aggressions or any aggressions from any source.

Answering the query of the AMERICAN in a speech at Lafayette, Ind., Mr. Hughes said:

"I want American rights protected throughout the world. I desire to see a great driving force of patriotic sentiment which will give us the motive power of progress. We cannot have progress unless we have that loyalty and love for our country which will enable us to get up steam to supply energy.

"That we may have that I say that American rights must be protected throughout the world with respect to American lives, property and commerce with respect to all nations of the world."

The tumultuous cheers which greeted this statement and shook the huge auditorium must have convinced Mr. Hughes that the AMERICAN knows the sentiment of the American people and was right in asking him to plant himself squarely on a platform of neutrality toward all and of stern resistance to any and to all aggressions upon the honor, the sovereignty and the inherent rights of the American people.

Strict respect for the rights of every other nation and strict respect from every other nation for the rights of America and American citizens—that is the American doctrine which the American people intend to have enforced at any cost, and from that determination neither the intrigue of Tories at home nor the threats or cajoleries of governments abroad can make them swerve one inch.

The Death Rate in This War

By Woods Hutchinson, M. D.

The World's Best Known Writer on Medical Subjects

PART ONE.

THERE is nothing new about this war, not even in point of deadliness. In spite of the much boasted military efficiency with which it is conducted, it takes as much lead to kill a man, namely, his own weight, and five times as much powder as it ever did before. Man's ingenuity in protecting himself seems to have almost exactly kept pace with his skill in devising new and horrible instruments of destruction, while the profession which devotes itself to saving human life has actually got well ahead of the one which specializes in destroying it. Man, the killer, is still the stupidest of all human incarnations and phases. All the "improvements" in methods of warfare—gunpowder, explosive shells, steam battleships, aeroplanes, submarines, telephones, etc.—have been invented by peaceful civilians, chemists, professor persons and the like. If it had been left to the fighters themselves, the professional soldiers and militarists, we should still be fighting with clubs and stone axes.

When the present calamity first broke loose and the earth fairly shook with the tramp of the millions marching into battle line, and our affrighted imagination could almost hear across the Atlantic the thunder of the Krupps and Creusots and the rumble of the siege trains, we hailed it in advance with bated breath as the bloodiest and most destructive in all history. With cannons that can hurl death twenty miles, heaving a projectile weighing a ton, which smashes through fourteen feet of solid concrete and blows a hole in the ground the size of a house when it explodes, it looked as if any army which had the temerity to stand in front of them would be simply blown off the face of the earth.

The terrible battle news, which came pouring in from the first week's clash of the armies along their hundred-mile fronts, seemed to justify the shuddering expectation. Deaths by tens of thousands, wounded men by hundreds of thousands blocking the railroads, flooding the hospitals, turning the whole countryside into a charnel house and a stench, filled the columns and the headlines. But gradually as our capacity for horror became exhausted and war by its horrid persistence had compelled us to accept it as a fact of every day life, our stunned and paralyzed sense of proportion came back and we again became capable of thinking in percentages. Even battle, murder and sudden death, which run on factory hours, sixteen a day, day and night shifts, seven days in the week and thirty out of every month, become commonplace after a while and a battle, if it lasts long enough, becomes a bore.

Slogan

By Jane McLean

DON'T prate about what is your right,
But bare your fists and show your might;
Life is another man to fight
Catch as catch can.

Don't talk of Life as scurvy Fate,
Who gave you favors just too late,
Or Luck who threw you smiles for bait
Before he ran.

Don't whine and wish that you were dead,
But wrestle for your daily bread,
And afterward let it be said
"He was a man."

Dorothy Dix Glad the 'Obey' Is Being Left Out of the Marriage Service

Matrimony Should Be a Full Partnership, Not a Survival of Slavery, She Says — And, Besides, No Bride Has Any Intention of Obeying Her Husband, Anyway

By Dorothy Dix

THE announcement that the Episcopal Church is going to expurgate the word "obey" from the marriage service has been hailed everywhere by women as tidings of great joy.

Aside from the fact that it is archaic and insulting in these days of feminine emancipation to ask a full-grown, intelligent woman to promise to obey anything except the dictates of her own conscience and judgment, women object to being called upon to perjure themselves in the most solemn act of their lives.

For no woman has any idea, or intention, or expectation of obeying her husband. More, if there were the slightest danger of her being forced to keep the vow of obedience, there would be no wedding bells for her.

Nor does the bridegroom either expect or desire that the woman he is espousing shall obey him. He isn't marrying a brainless child, or a humble slave, but a woman whom he has picked out for a companion through life, and who is as broad minded and as well educated as himself. Why, then, should she take his orders? Why should she do his bidding?

It would strike the average man as a pretty cheeky thing even to suggest that he should expect his wife to obey him. Besides, the thing simply isn't done now, you know.

Of course, there are those who insist that a woman should promise to obey her husband, because he is the head of the house. Nonsense. This head-of-the-house theory has been first aid to more divorces than any other cause in the world, because it's generally only after a woman gets to the place that she can't endure her husband's tyranny any longer that she hires a private detective to hunt up his record.

A True Marriage Is a Full Partnership and Not a Little Monarchy

In its finest essence marriage is a partnership wherein a man and a woman pool their whole resources. The woman puts in everything that she has of heart and brain and purse, even more completely than the man does, and this being the case she is certainly entitled to an equal voice with him in deciding every problem that arises in their joint lives.

Two men who are equal partners in a business do not arrogate the right of "bossing" each other. They consult, they defer to each other. One or the other gives in when they differ, as seems best and wisest. Each partner is supreme in his own department, and, if the firm prospers, the partner with the most far-seeing judgment directs the affairs of the business.

There is no reason why this plan shouldn't work out just as well in domestic life as it does in commercial life, and in reality wherever you find a happy marriage the aforesaid plan is the one that is used.

After all, the mere putting on of trousers does not endow the wearer thereof with supernatural wisdom, and in many a family the gray mare is the better horse. Many a wife has more intelligence, keener perceptions, a wider outlook, and even more business sense than her husband. How idiotic even the suggestion that she should obey him, and that he should arbitrarily decide the family destiny!

And while the marriage service is being overhauled for deadwood, there is another passage that might be deleted with profit. That is the phrase in which the man promises the bride, "with all my worldly goods I thee endow," and which is just as much a falsehood as the bride's promise to obey him.

No man has any intention of endowing his wife with all of his worldly goods when he gets married. We have yet to hear of a bridegroom making over all of his property to his wife as a bridal gift. The wife has only so much of her husband's income as he chooses to hand out to her from time to time. She can't check against his account in a bank unless he makes special arrangements entitling her to do so. She can't collect his salary. She can't sell or mortgage his real estate. When he dies he can even leave most of his property away from her, although she may have worked and saved for fifty years to help him accumulate it.

Why Not Be Honest About It and Begin Married Life Without Humbug?

The only worldly goods a man really bestows on his wife by the marriage ceremony is a charge account, and he can stop that whenever he likes by the simple expedient of publishing in the papers that he will no longer be responsible for her debts. Considering that most wives do not receive from their husbands even a personal allowance, but have to go to him day by day with supplications for every dollar they need, it would seem to be the part of good taste to omit all reference to worldly goods from the ceremony that binds two loving hearts together.

Certainly, if men knew beforehand that their wives didn't intend to obey them, and women were aware that their husbands were not going to turn over their pocketbooks to them, they would start on a more honest platform, and would have fewer illusions.

Anyway, whether you look upon marriage as a religious sacrament or a civil contract, it takes away from its sacredness and binding quality to base it on a lie, on an oath that a man and woman take knowing when they take it that they do not mean to keep it, and the church will do well to so change the marriage ceremony that bride and bridegroom will not be forced to commit perjury.

In-Shoots

If men could keep up the courtship speed after the wedding, marriage would not be a failure in so many cases.

The man continually on the run is liable to dash past a good thing now and then.

Success follows success more often than it does failure.

The devil knows every man's price.

Man will usually run away from a girl who runs after him. But in case a widow is on the trail he throws up his hands and surrenders.

If some men were as loyal to their wives as they are to barroom friends the recording angel could pause occasionally for breath.

If you have been played for a sucker it is better to laugh than cry over the matter.
